WALLSTREET BEAR MARKET FOR HOOVER INAUGURAL

Alternate Periods of Heaviness and Strength Characterize Day's Trade on Exchange.

SHARP REACTION IN THE LAST HOUR

Long List of Losses of 1 to 5 Points at Close—Exchange Loans Down $56,618,325.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Alternate periods of heaviness and strength characterized today's stock market, with the general list moving sharply on heavy selling of both accounts in the last hour of trading. American Express rose 25½ points, Allied Chemicals 2½ and a long list of others closed 1 to 5 points lower.

The market opened irregularly after, turned sharply downward in the late forenoon and then turned upward again. Early losses of 1 to 5 points were cut down, wiped out, and a fairly long list of stocks sold 1 to 8 points higher, with about a dozen new high ground, by early afternoon.

Active selling was encountered in the late afternoon, driving 18. Standard Oil, Carbide, Bethlehem Steel and other favorites to their lowest figures of the day. Radio (old) slid down further to 15, compared to its earlier rise of 406, while Johns Manville at 5, and Allied Chemical 13 units.

Losses Down $56,618,325.
The New York Stock Exchange reports a decrease of $56,618,325 in member loans during the month of February, the total on the last day of the month being $6,675,537.

The average of 50 industrial stocks closed 2.5 points lower, 20 made 3 of a point, and 20 utilized 2 points.

Call money remained unchanged 14 per cent, but the supply of cash was fairly plentiful despite calling of about $15,000,000 for $20,000,000 in loans. With month-end demands out of the way, easier tone is expected until the banks begin preparations for March 15 Government financial and income tax payments.

At the New York Stock Exchange, the market is expected to begin the revolution shortly before noon.

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—The Mexican Government mobilized loyal forces today to meet attacks of revolutionaries.

General Mariano Escobar, former President, was made Secretary of War, in charge of all military operations.

Revolutionary outbreaks in Mexico were a source of deep concern in many speculative quarters, but relatively few American companies listed on the "big board" have properties which may be directly affected, fears expressed that the news may be utilized by "bear" traders as an excuse for a general assault on the market.

Mining shares changed hands in moderate volume at advancing prices, and in the last hour of trading, Kenwood (new) moved up to a new high of 12, and 100 shares.

Mother Lode changed hands at 10, followed by blocks of 7500 at 22,000 at 6, duplicating year's top. National Power & Light, Murray Corporation and others moved into new high ground on gains of 3 to 5½ points early afternoon.

Heavy buying of Chrysler, which quickly advanced 4 points, featured early afternoon trading. In the racing news of selling, General Motor dropped 4½ points, Montgomery Ward 4 and Packard Motor, Bethlehem Steel and Wright Aeronautical 2 each.

Regular price movements ushered in a new day on the New York Stock Exchange.

A Telegram From Calvin Coolidge

THE WHITE HOUSE, March 4.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
A BILL appropriating $48,000 to improve Mount Weather for a presidential refuge is just being signed by me. I congratulate you on the success of the campaign first broached in your newspaper and almost unanimously approved by the press of the nation. The Congress has shown an inclination to treat a President with the same kind of consideration it extends to our birds and other wild life.

Revolutionists Seize Government in Parts of Vera Cruz and Sonora and Claim Aid in Eight States

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—After Calvin Coolidge had departed from Washington this afternoon, the Ladies' Home Journal announced that the former President had written three articles on "Promoting Peace" for the publication.

The announcement, signed by Loring A. Schuler, editor of the magazine, says:

"Calvin Coolidge has written for the Ladies' Home Journal three articles on the principles of peace.

"In his Armistice day speech of last November, the retiring President said: 'For the cause of peace the United States is adopting the only practical principles that have ever been proposed, of preparation, limitation and renunciation.'

"He has elaborated these three fundamentals—Preparation, limitation, renunciation—in three articles under the general title, 'Promoting Peace.'

"The first of Mr. Coolidge's articles will appear in the April issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, the second in May and the third in June."

By the Associated Press.

LAREDO, Tex., March 4.—Unconfirmed reports here today said Gen. Antonio Villareal announced he had fled from the President of Mexico, has rebelled and seized Monterrey, Mexico, about 150 miles from Laredo.

The reports, which were received over a private wire from Monterrey added that Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, divisional general in charge of Federal troops in the State of Coahuila, was in a conflict with rebels near Monterrey.

It was stated that their progress would be slow because of the mountainous territory through which they must pass.

Meanwhile quiet and order prevails in Vera Cruz with the State in charge of Gen. Jesus Maria Aguirre.

DEMAND FOR ENFORCEMENT OF LAW MADE IN ADDRESS

Executive Also Emphasizes Need for General Overhauling of Criminal Procedure in Nation.

FOR DRY WORK IN JUSTICE BUREAU

Urges Way Be Found for U. S. to Take Place in World Court and Further Arms Limitation.

THE text of President Hoover's inaugural address will be found on page 15 of this edition.

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Herbert Hoover in his inaugural address, delivered immediately after he had taken the oath of office today as the thirty-first President of the United States, gave primary emphasis to a demand for law enforcement and a general overhauling of our criminal procedure, and to a declaration that the United States, through further limitation of armaments and other practical measures, stood ready to co-operate to the fullest extent in establishing world peace.

He spoke for determined action at home to stamp out "the undoubtedly abuses which have grown up under the eighteenth amendment" and for "active effort" in the foreign field to bring about the peaceful settlement of controversies.

Asserting that "most malignant of all the dangers besetting the Republic is "disregard and disobedience of law," President Hoover announced for the first time that his proposed investigation of prohibition enforcement would deal not alone with that subject, but would be "a searching investigation of the whole structure of our Federal system of jurisprudence, to include the method of enforcement of the eighteenth amendment, and the causes of abuse under it."

For Co-operation by Citizens.

In this connection he called both for warfare upon the "criminal elements" engaged in the illegal sale of liquor and for observance of the fine points of diplomacy or politics, but rather with the "human" side of life in the White House.

Mr. Coolidge will write of such things as the health of a President, how it is maintained so that he may give full energy of body and mind to his task of serving the people, and in what ways the health problems of the President differ from that of other officials.

There would be little traffic in illegal liquor," he said, "if only criminals patronized it. We must awake to the fact that this patronage from large numbers of law-abiding citizens is supplying the rewards and stimulating crime."

Brilliant Spectacle Marks Inauguration of Hoover and Curtis

Crowds Early Fill Stands for Parade

Coolidge Bids Farewell to White House and Then Escorts His Successor to Capitol.

On the platform with the new and outgoing Presidents and the Chief Justice of the United States was an assembly of Senators, foreign Ambassadors and Ministers in their brilliant court costumes, the associate Justices of the Supreme Court, members of the new and the old Cabinet, Senators and other notables.

All these came out together from the ceremony in the Senate Chamber, their ears still ringing with the vehemence, "I take back nothing," of Vice President Coolidge. Except the favorites who were sheltered under the scant roof of the platform, they came into the rain that falls alike on the silk topper and the slouch hat.

A red-coated band in front of the stand played, and a cheer went up when the central figures of the drama appeared. A brief pause, and the new President and the massive bulk of the Chief Justice were seen at the front.

At the left, from the viewpoint of those facing the stage, stood the Chief Justice. At the right, looking across the Chief Justice, stood Mr. Hoover. The oath was taken, and Mr. Hoover began his address to the thirty-first President of the nation.

Calvin Coolidge sat, almost directly behind him as he spoke. Near by was the new first lady. The face of the retiring President was expressionless.

Motion of Coolidge Applauded.

The rain acted as a deterrent upon applause. The first such sign of approval for the President's words greeted his tribute to Calvin Coolidge. There was a big hand that, just as there was a hand for Mr. Coolidge, when he walked into the Senate chamber to see the Vice President take the oath.

Mr. Hoover read his speech at a good pace, in the manner made familiar by his campaign addresses. Now and then, as if wishing to emphasize a point, he spoke with deliberate spacing between his words. He did this, for example, when he expressed his passionate longing for world peace.

But before the President spoke of world peace, he dwelt on the other main topic of his address: his demand for enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and for a general strengthening of the judicial system, in the interest of swifter and surer justice.

There was a flurry of applause—the second during the address—when he declared that the measure of the Government's success in enforcing the laws would depend upon the moral support it received from the public. Again there was a thin sheet of approval for his appeal to the people to "condemn all transactions with illegal liquor."

Senate Inadvertently Omitted.

It was noticed that the section dealing with his promised national investigation of "the whole structure of our Federal system of jurisprudence," he omitted a sentence that appeared in the advance copies released to the press. This is the sentence in which he declared for the transfer of prohibition enforcement activities from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice.

At the White House later, however, it was said that the President stood by what was in the prepared address.)

At no time was there a general outbreak of applause from the crowd. The rain and the general discomfort made for apathy. One does not clap his hands while holding an umbrella.

The statement that the recent election had shown the people against government ownership or operation of business met with considerable approval from those in the vicinity of the speaker, and again there was applause within the sheltered area for the President's sentiments regarding world peace and his implied disavowal of any desire to take the United States into the League of Nations.

Some of the President's concluding words were lost to those on the platform by the roar of an airplane that twice sailed low overhead.

The reading of the speech took about 35 minutes. In a few more minutes, the ex-President was on his way back to Northampton and the new President was going to the White House.

As one of the dignitaries on the stand remarked, when a raindrop caught him in the eye, it was a welcome sign of a dry administration.

Principal in Dry Program Asleep

Early: Hoover Breaks a Bone.

Principals in the day's events were stirring while many of the city's guests still were asleep. President Coolidge and Hoover both were up shortly after 4 o'clock, and by 5:30 the retiring chief executive was at his desk, clearing away the last work of his administration. Hoover breakfasted alone at 5 o'clock on scrambled eggs and toast. At that hour all the others in the big house on S. street still were taking a last 40 winks against

HOOVER HIGHLIGHTS

WASHINGTON, March 4.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S inaugural address bristled with epithets. Here are some of them:

We are steadily building a new race—a new civilization great in its own attainments.

Rigid and expeditious justice is the first safeguard of freedom, the basis of all ordered liberty, the vital force of progress.

There would be little traffic in illegal liquor if only criminals patronized it.

The duty of citizens to support the law is co-equal with the duty of their Government to enforce the laws which exist.

Our whole system of self-government will crumble if officials elect what laws they will enforce or citizens elect what laws they will support.

Those who have a true understanding of America know that we have no desire for territorial expansion for economic the wearying day-long program ahead. After breakfast Justice Harlan Stone of the Supreme Court, a friend and neighbor of the President-elect, dropped in for a visit.

Mrs. Hoover was having breakfast at 8:30 o'clock with her sister, Mrs. Mary Lovett of Long Beach, Cal., and her uncle, W. D. Henry of Wahpeton, N. D., when two large sacks of mail were delivered at the front door. Manifestly they contained many presents from admirers, but for the time being they remained unopened.

Coolidge Signs 100 Bills.

In his first hour and a half at his desk President Coolidge signed more than 100 bills. He had planned to receive no callers but he let in Representative Wright of New York, former Asst. Secretary of War, very goodly, and Representative Wingo of Arkansas to inquire about a piece of Arkansas legislation.

After breakfast he had a chat with his chief while a pipe and drum corps from Petersburg, Va., serenaded the White House from Lafayette Square, across the avenue.

All along the avenue, as the party passed swiftly by, cheers preceded and followed it. Both Coolidge and Hoover kept their high silk hats waving in acknowledgement. The party reached the Capitol at 11:15 a. m., and the President and President-elect were escorted to the President's room, while the ladies of the party were ushered to seats in the Senate gallery that they might witness the inauguration of Vice President Curtis.

For more than two hours thousands had been waiting outside the Capitol Building. The great crowd, only a small percentage seated in the temporary stands, stretched from the Senate Office Building on the left and the House Office quarters on the right, an area about three city blocks in length. It had assumed such a size it could during the long wait, and it let itself go with a great reverberating cheer as the inaugural party came into view.

While Mr. Coolidge busied himself with last-minute bills in the official room, and Senator Curtis attended the Vice President's room nearby, final preparations for the outdoor ceremonies went on.

The crowd on the plaza outside heard the Senate chamber proceedings over the radio.

While they were in progress a fine rain began to fall. It was hardly visible, but it was wet. Women went up and down between the rows of umbrellas and coats, calling out to the crowd. The Vice President had reached the White House at 10:30 a. m., and members of the Senate were called to escort him to the executive mansion.

As he climbed into his car, Coolidge stopped for a moment to shake hands with a little girl whose mother thrust her forward from the crowd. The Vice President had reached the White House at 10:30 a. m., and members of the Senate were called to escort him to the executive mansion.

The rain let up a bit by 12:30, but it still was sufficient to keep umbrellas and coats coming up as the time drew near for Hoover to appear in the inaugural stand to the east.

The rain let up a bit by 12:30, but it still was sufficient to keep umbrellas and coats coming up as the time drew near for Hoover to appear in the inaugural stand to the east.

Mrs. Dawes, wife of the retiring Vice President, also was with the gathering group in the White House, but her husband stayed on the job in the Senate chamber. It was exactly 10:30 o'clock when Mr. and Mrs. Hoover left their home for the White House. They whisked down S street to Connecticut Avenue and then southward to the executive mansion. In a White House automobile accompanied by a motor cycle escort. The crowd about the entrance of the S street house cheered as they departed.

Coolidge Bids Staff Farewell.

The Hoovers reached the White House just as President Coolidge had finished shaking hands with the staff at the executive offices, and the servants who have attended to his wants for more than seven years. Mr. Coolidge had left his desk for the last time at 10:23 o'clock.

Just at 11 o'clock members of the official party emerged under the tall white pillars of the north portico. Hoover was one of the first to appear. Three troops of cavalry, their restless mounts keeping up a clatter in the pavement, were drawn up at the White House gates ready to form the escort.

For the Coolidge and the President-elect took place in the rear seat of an open touring car, the first in the procession, with Coolidge on the right. In the dozen cars behind rode Mrs. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover, together in a landau; Senator Curtis, his sister, Mrs. Gann, Mrs. Dawes, members of the Cabinet, the White House aids, and a delegation of G. A. R. veterans, acting as a guard of honor. The President and President-elect descended the steps to enter their car, with their wives together just behind them, these paused for a moment for the photographers, who got an additional unexpected treat shortly afterward when the self-starter of the big car refused to work. While an exasperated chauffeur tinkered for minute or two, Coolidge

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Mrs. Coolidge sat to the retiring President's left.

When all had been quieted at last, the clerk of the Supreme Court, C. Elmer Cropley, stepped forward holding on his outstretched hand the little Bible which Mr. Hoover had chosen to seal his obligation. It was open at his chosen passage, Proverbs 29:18, saying:

"Where there is no vision the people perish; but he that keepeth the law, happy is he." The selection was made over night, for the incoming President had indicated previously he would ask that the book be opened at the fifth chapter of St. Matthew, the Sermon on the Mount.

Cropley handed the Bible to Chief Justice Taft, who advanced to Mr. Hoover's left, at the front of the platform. Holding the Bible in his left hand the Chief Justice repeated the words of the presidential oath he himself had taken 20 years ago today, and Mr. Hoover repeated it after him in words that carried out over the crowd:

"Do I solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Strong Sets Up a Roar.

Then as President Hoover bent forward and kissed the open book, the crowd set up a tremendous roar. "Coolidge," ex-Präsident, was shouting.

With head uncovered, the new President began at once the delivery of his inaugural address. The rain was still falling.

Mr. Hoover read his address in a steady voice, looking up at intervals to the high roof and pattered on his face.

The first applause greeted the new President's declaration that for recovery of the nation is deeply indebted to Calvin Coolidge.

MRS. HELEN MATLOCK, on trial for murder in the killing of her husband, "Good Time Charley" Matlock, last Nov. 6, in an apartment where he had established another "Mrs. Matlock," photographed with her father-in-law, Patrolman Andrew Matlock, who is expected to be an important defense witness.

COOLIGES LEAVE FOR NORTHAMPTON AFTER CEREMONY

waving their hands as the train disappeared at 2:31 p. m.

A transcript of the radio "good-bye" to the American people was made public by the National Broadcasting Co.

Introduced by David Lawrence, Washington political writer, Mr. Coolidge said: "At the request of my friend, David Lawrence, I take this occasion to bid good-bye to all those who may be listening and hope they will enjoy the future as much as I have enjoyed the past."

Puts in Extra Hours.

Mr. Coolidge worked at 7:30 o'clock, took a short walk in the White House grounds and then, after breakfast with his family, went to his desk at 8:30. He still had some loose ends of the final Congressional offerings to dispose of.

No Reference to Separation.

There was no reference to the separation so soon to come with the most distinguished member of the congregation, but in the church calendar was a note calling attention to the fact that rarely while in Washington had the President and Mrs. Coolidge missed attendance at services.

"Here he has come, not to be observed by men, but to worship God," the note continued. "The wide influence of the quiet example of this public servant and his noble wife in constant and commanding leadership and service is beyond reckoning. We offer our heartfelt prayers to God that He will continue to bless and use in the work of His kingdom these servants of Christ whom we respect and love."

2000 Smith College Girls to Join in Welcome to Coolidge.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 4.—To the throng which will welcome the return of Calvin Coolidge to his home here was added today 2000 students of Smith College. Announcement was made that chapel services would be held before the ex-President's arrival to permit the young women to participate in the ceremonies.

Strong Along Route.

A crowd of sightseers, here for the Hoover inaugural, paid its respects to the President as he came from the White House with Mrs. Coolidge on his way to church.

They lined the driveways of the White House grounds and applauded as he passed in his car.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge nodded and smiled happily back at the crowd.

The crowd soon dispersed as another big line of folk hurried to see another.

Emotional insanity may figure in the defense. Mrs. Matlock has professed not to remember much of the events immediately preceding the shooting.

However, Miss

Matlock has told how Mrs. Matlock came to her apartment in the Guild Hall, 4907 West Pine boulevard, and held her prisoner for two hours, anticipating the visit of Mr. Coolidge. When Matlock entered, his wife shot him with a revolver and had held her in her lap. Then she left him in the same house with him.

Another, Louis Becker, said he would be inclined to be lenient to a woman defendant. Still another, John Boorman, said the defendant is a woman and could make no difference to him considering a verdict.

COLLECTOR ROBBED OF $300 BY THREE YOUNGS IN AUTO

They Board His Truck When Bad Stretch of Road in County Force Him to Show Down.

Ivan Goodwin, 222 Hoffmeister place, a collector for the Lungstras Dyeing and Cleaning Co., was robbed of 12 money sacks, containing between $300 and $400, by three armed youths this afternoon.

Goodwin was driving a delivery truck in Wydowne boulevard, one block east of Hanley road, St. Louis, when, a bad stretch of road forced him to slow down. As he did so, two of the youths got out of their car and ran into the truck and, at the point of revolvers, forced Goodwin to drive into West Breenwood, a subdivision.

There they took the money sacks, containing collections from several Lungstras branches in the West End, and escaped in their own car, in which their companion had followed them.

An inquest will be held.

ES OF A FRACTURED HIP

August Kuhn, 62, Was Injured by Fall, Feb. 8.

August Kuhn, 62 years old, died at City Hospital early today as the result of a fractured hip suffered when he fell at his home, 1664 Sutherland avenue.

An inquest will be held.

MAN IN SAFETY ZONE IS STRUCK BY AUTO

Two persons were seriously injured last night when struck by automobiles, the drivers of which fled from the scene, and a man was struck while standing in a safety zone while waiting for a street car.

Fred Aubuchon, 14 years old, 441 Antelope street, was picked up in a dazed condition at Calvary avenue and North Broadway and later told police he had been struck by an automobile. He is at City Hospital with a fractured skull.

Dr. Edwin Squires, 1524 Deer street, was struck by a truck driven by a Negro at Grand boulevard and Easton avenue. The driver did not stop. Dr. Squires suffered internal injuries and lacerations. The license number of the truck had been issued to a resident of Roadsidesville, Mo.

William Neller, 4642 Cates avenue, suffered fractures of the ribs and skull at 7:30 p. m. when struck while standing in a safety zone at Academy avenue and Page boulevard by a machine driven by Adolph Toffe, 5203 Page boulevard.

Milton S. Grant, 5068 Cates avenue, suffered a fractured skull at 11 p. m. when an automobile in which he was riding, with Ben Hickel, 910 Academy avenue, collided with a machine driven by Charles Hall, 2902 Milton avenue, on the Compton avenue viaduct. Hall's car crashed against the railing of the viaduct, but he escaped injury.

Edward Hafer of St. Charles suffered a fractured skull at 10 p. m. when his automobile crashed into a concrete safety island at Kingshighway and Fountain avenue.

Miss Dorothy Shirley, 5149 Wabasha avenue, suffered internal injuries and a broken nose, and Richard Bergner, 4024 North Ninth street, was cut and bruised yesterday when an automobile driven by Bergner overturned in a ditch on Halls Ferry road.

Robert McCormick, 4451 Vista avenue, suffered fractured ribs and John Other, 312 North Seventeenth street, received a fractured skull when struck by a machine driven by Lester Wente, 2714A Hampton avenue, at Vandeventer and Boyle avenues.

DETECTIVE 'BOOKMAKERS' TAKE PRISONERS AS WELL AS BETS

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, March 4.—Fourteen persons learned a new kind of bookmaking Saturday when four well-dressed detectives, carrying canes, entered an alleged gambling house and ensconced themselves as bookmakers. A few minutes later Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Dace entered. "Five on 'Agitation,'" said Mrs. Dace.

"There's enough agitation here," said Detective Frank McKenna, who was taking the bets. "Join the rest of the company in the other room." Two other customers were similarly arrested by the time the patrol wagon arrived.

"Meet our head 'bookee,'" McKenna said a few minutes later at the police station when he introduced the prisoners to the desk sergeant. Two men were booked as keepers of a gambling house and the others as inmates.

Advice of Doctors Helps Many Here To End Colds Quickly

STOPPED COLD PLEASANT WAY!

Many Here Surprised to Find How Quickly Head Colds, Coughs and Chest Colds Disappear When Treated at Home by Hospital Method, Doctors Now Advise.

A tempting taste! Almost instant relief! Then the joy of seeing a stubborn head cold or chest cold disappear quickly—often in just a few hours—when treated by a pleasant hospital method which doctors now advise for home use. And this experience of Miss Ethel Clarke has been shared by vast numbers of people in St. Louis and vicinity.

Pleasant To Take— Gave Instant Relief!

Miss Clarke, for example, awoke with a slight fever and an "aching" irritated feeling in her nose, throat and chest. Instead of ending it at once by prompt treatment, she kept hoping it would "cure itself." But that night the cold bothered her so she could not sleep, by moving constantly around her to fear pneumonia and call the doctor. Acting on his advice she took double strength doses of Ayer's Pectoral—the hospital certified medicament of wild cherry, terpin hydrate and other ingredients used to help reduce fever, clear up congestion and drive the cold out of one's system.

Relief began almost instantly when she felt its comforting, healing warmth—from her nose passages down into her chest. Congestion began to clear up and before long her fever was normal and the "aching" feeling had disappeared. Next morning she was a lot better and in just a day or so all trace of the cold had cleared up entirely.

Note: See other cases—all certified by the attending physician.

DOCTOR USED QUICKEST WAY TO END HIS COLD

Goes Straight to Seat of Cold and Drives It Out of System—Brings Quick, Sure Relief!

In one's own home it is now possible to get quick relief—often in a few hours—from a stuffy head cold, cough or chest cold. For doctors are now recommending for home use a hospital certified remedy that is inexpensive, pleasant to take and ideally suited to the delicate stomachs of old folks and children.

L. R. Preseley, for example, asked his doctor for a prescription when his cold got so bad he felt "aching" all over. The doctor immediately gave him a large dose of Ayer's Pectoral and advised him to continue the treatment every half hour until the "feverish," "aching" feeling was gone, then once every two hours. In just a few minutes he began to feel better and slept soundly all night. In another day or so the cold congestion had disappeared entirely and he was back at work.

Note: See other cases—all certified by the attending physician.

COLD GONE BEFORE DOCTOR RETURNED

Got Almost Instant Relief When Doctor Advised Home Use of Hospital Remedy

Urging the need to play safe in dealing with children's colds at this time of year, doctors are now advising home use of a hospital remedy that gives almost instant relief—then quickly clears up the cold.

S. L. Bennett, Jr., son of S. L. Bennett, has had such severe chest pains his mother called the doctor. Examination showed a great deal of congestion and irritation due to strain of coughing. She liked the pleasant taste of Ayer's Pectoral, the doctor reported, and it stopped the harsh coughing almost immediately. In a few hours his cough and cold passages were clearing up rapidly and in another day or so there was no trace left of the cold.

70TH CONGRESS ENDS ITS WORK IN QUIET SESSION

Several Minor Measures Passed by House, Which Then Eulogizes Its Retiring Members.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The Seventieth Congress adjourned today amid the splendor and ceremony which accompany such an event only every four years.

With a President, a President-elect, a Vice President, a Vice President-elect, the Supreme Court, high army and navy officials, the diplomatic corps, and crowds drawn by the inaugural ceremonies as spectators, Senate and House, meeting in joint session, closed the doors of the old Congress and prepared for the opening of a new.

Legislative accomplishment today was of an extremely minor nature. The House acted on one or two bills and hurried to the Senate chamber to witness the induction of office of Vice President Charles Curtis. An attempt was made in the Senate to pass the bill postponing the effective date of the national origins clause of the immigration act, but it was unsuccessful.

Special Session Adjourns.

Then, after the swearing in of Curtis, a special session of the Senate was called, but that, too, adjourned after the new members had taken the oath of office. The extra session was necessary to confirm nominations, including those of the Hoover Cabinet.

The last minutes of the House session were given over to the retiring Democratic floor leader, Frank J. Gilmer of Tennessee, who has been appointed a Judge of the Customs Court of Appeals.

Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the Republican leader, called upon Gilmer to make the closing remarks, telling him that "it would be appropriate" for him to speak about himself.

Besides bidding the House members farewell, Gilmer presented a resolution to Speaker Longworth in which he congratulated the Speaker upon his method of presiding over the House. Longworth in expressing his appreciation showed such deep emotion that he was barely able to speak.

Vice President Curtis administered the oath to the new members of the Senate. They included Tom Connally (Dem.), Texas; Phillips Lee Goldsborough (Rep.), Maryland; Henry D. Hatfield (Rep.), West Virginia; Felix Herbert (Rep.), Rhode Island; Hamilton F. Kean (Rep.), New Jersey; Rose C. Patterson (Rep.), Missouri; John G. Townsend (Rep.), Delaware; Frederick C. Walcott (Rep.), Connecticut.

Bronson Cutting (Rep.), New Mexico, was the only one of the newly elected members not present.

At 10 o'clock the House assembled in a chamber filled with empty seats and galleries. At 11 Vice President Dawes called the Senate to order for the last time.

A motion was adopted appointing a committee to await on the President, who was on his way to the Capitol. Dawes named the two leaders, Senator Watson (Rep.), Indiana, and Robinson (Dem.), Arkansas.

Then Senator Smoot (Rep.), Utah, read an encomium to Curtis, who ended 20 years' service in the Senate Saturday night to assume the Vice Presidency today.

Just before the arrival at the Capitol of the inaugural party, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for Vice President in his last campaign, arose on the floor to praise Curtis, his old friend and political rival.

He has, to his credit, a long record of usefulness in both House of Congress and in the Senate. "I arise to pay him a deserved tribute."

"We feel the best traditions of the Senate will be preserved and continued during his service as president of this body."

Few measures of importance remained to be acted upon at adjournment. One doomed to die and strangely enough, one in which Hoover has a real interest, was that passed by the House yesterday by a vote of 190 to 153. It day would postpone for one year from July 1 the placing in effect of the national origins clause of the immigration act. Its chances of becoming a law faded in the Senate where opponents yesterday gained the whip hand.

Must Sign Order Next Month.

Under existing law Hoover, as resident, must sign an order next month, placing the clause in effect on July 1. In his campaign he favored repeal of the provision which would revise the quota restrictions in favor of Great Britain and Northern Ireland at the expense of Germany, Sweden and Norway.

Apart from this, little legislation was left incomplete. There were,

however, a number of nominations left unconfirmed—passed up by the Senate because of a lack of time—and they included the nomination of a member of the Coolidge Cabinet, Curtis D. Wilbur, the Secretary of the Navy, to be a Federal Judge in the Pacific Coast area.

Evangelist Richey Returns.

The Rev. Raymond T. Richey,

Evangelist who conducted a six-week revival at the Coliseum last fall, returned to St. Louis yesterday to open a one-week meeting at Trinity Tabernacle, Page boulevard and Marcus avenues.

HOOVER ENDS BUSY SUNDAY AT DINNER WITH COOLIGES

Crowds Gather at Home When He and Family De-part for Church Services —Frowns at Applause.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Herbert Hoover fo' himself crowded yesterday with requirements of his approaching high d'ys to the exclusion of his usual rule of Sunday relaxation.

Despite this pressure on his time, however, he went with Mrs. Hoover and other members of his family to the Little Friends' meeting house in Columbia Heights for an hour of the quiet religious observance that is the custom of this faith.

With Mrs. Hoover he was a dinner guest of the President and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House last night. This was in the nature of a leave-taking between the outgoing and incoming Presidents so long associated in the administration of governmental affairs.

Before that the President-elect had called the members-to-be of his own Cabinet together at his S street home for their first joint meeting. This was around the lunch table with business discussion deferred until tomorrow.

After the luncheon, it was announced that Secretary of Labor Davis had consented to remain in the Cabinet for one year to complete certain matters now under way. While there was no statement as to the tenure of Secretary Mellon, the general understanding has been that he would retire after two more years as head of the Treasury Department.

Mr. Hoover had a long visit with Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, who is to be Secretary of the Interior. They are both graduates at Stanford and have been friends of much more than usual intimacy in the years since.

Receives Ambassador Blies.

The President-elect also received late in the day Robert Woods Bliss, Ambassador to the Argentine, whose guess Mr. Hoover was at Buenos Aires during his Latin-American good will tour. They talked of that trip and other things.

While Mr. Hoover was thus engaged in the last contacts of private life in his S street home, the fingers of the great inauguration creeps filling down the streets kept drifting out to the fashionable residential district of Washington and passing his door.

From early morning until night-fall the crowds moved, some afoot, others in automobiles and still others in huge sight-seeing busses. Hundreds stood about for hours in the bright sunshine hoping for a glimpse of the next chief executive, but as in machines seemed content to look at the big red brick house confident that he believed that tomorrow they would get a good view of him as he rode to the Capitol to take the oath of office and back again to the White House.

The President-elect was up at his usual early hour yesterday for there never is any late Sunday sleeping for him as for most folks, and he had breakfast shortly after 8 o'clock before some of the others in the household were astir.

After breakfast he had a long conference with Larry Richey, one of his secretaries, going over some last-minute details and then dressed for church. A crowd had gathered outside early awaiting his appearance and every time the door of the big house opened there was a hush over the throng.

Salutes Police Guard.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoover appeared at 10:45 a. m. walking rapidly down the steps and entering an automobile at the west. President Coolidge had gathered outside early awaiting his appearance and every time the door of the big house opened there was a hush over the throng.

The President had on his familiar gray fedora hat—it looked like a brand-new one—a dark gray overcoat, black shoes and a gray suit with a single-breasted coat. The double-breasted kind usually worn by him.

Mrs. Hoover was wrapped in a sealskin coat with a collar of fur, with a tight-fitting velvet turban on her head and wore black sealskin shoes. Mr. Hoover's sister, Mrs. Mary Leavitt of Long Beach, Calif.

26 OF COMMITTEE OUT FOR M'DANIEL

Twenty-One Backing Ex-Judge Priest and Two Are for Dr. Simon.

Twenty-six members of the Democratic City Committee now are supporting Lawrence McDaniel for the Democratic nomination for Mayor and two more are claimed for him, while 21 are backing Henry E. Priest, who also claimed the nomination. The third candidate, Dr. John H. Simon, and four members are awaiting ward meetings before announcing their stand.

McDaniel has the support of 16 men and 10 women on the committee, and the additional ones claimed for him are women. Priest is favored by 14 women and seven men and claims another woman's aid.

The Twenty-fourth Ward organization voted yesterday not to endorse either candidate, to avoid dissension as John English, com-mittee chairman for Priest, and Dr. Simon addressed the meeting briefly and Priest was represented by his campaign manager, William Hughes, and L. J. Gaudiondi of the Democratic State Committee.

The Sixteenth Ward organization has endorsed McDaniel. Committee chairman William Clark of the Twenty-first Ward has verified the claim of Dr. Simon's supporters that he is for Priest, but Mrs. Elizabeth Corry, committeewoman, has withheld an announcement, although claimed for Priest. James Stewart of the Thirteenth Ward, P. J. McNamara of the Twenty-sixth and L. May of the Twenty-seventh all have come out for priest. Thomas F. Doran and Mrs. Cleo Bates of the Fourteenth, it has been learned, are supporting McDaniel and a meeting of their organization Wednesday night is expected to endorse McDaniel.

Whether the Twenty-third Ward organization endorsed Priest at its meeting last Friday night is a moot question. John Whalen, an ardent McDaniel supporter, said it did not, and M. J. McGee, committeewoman, who is for Priest personally, agreed with him. Whalen served as temporary chairman of the meeting, which was attended by about 75 persons. However, Miss Nell Dwyer, committeewoman, who is active in Priest's behalf, is equally positive that a motion that the organization endorse him was made and that it passed. The ward organization will meet again Thursday night at Carondelet Library. McGee and Whalen said they did not expect the organization to endorse any candidate then.

NEW YORK, March 4.—William Fox confirmed yesterday the report that the Fox Theater Corporation has acquired Loew's, Inc., which controls the great producing company, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The typewritten statement which he gave to reporters at the Fox Theater stated that Fox theaters had bought "a substantial block" of stock, but its subsequent offering left no doubt that this meant control. The stock of this $105,000,000 corporation was bought from the family of the late Marcus Loew and "from a group of temporary chairman of the meeting, which was attended by about 75 persons. Both the Twenty-third Ward organization endorsed Priest at its meeting last Friday night is a moot question. John Whalen, an ardent McDaniel supporter, said it did not, and M. J. McGee, committeewoman, who is for Priest personally, agreed with him. Whalen served as temporary chairman of the meeting, which was attended by about 75 persons. However, Miss Nell Dwyer, committeewoman, who is active in Priest's behalf, is equally positive that a motion that the organization endorse him was made and that it passed. ## EXPLANATION BY PORTES GIL OF CAUSE OF REVOLT

He Calls It Attempt of Military Men to Impose Presidential Candidate on Mexican People.

AVERS HE KNEW IT WAS BREWING

Declares Valenzuela (Candidate for Executive) Seems Not to Wish for
"a Democratic Struggle."

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—Mexico City newspapers today published a signed statement from President Emilio Portes Gil professing the Government would make a speedy end to the revolt because a large part of the army had remained loyal and because of public sympathy. His statement follows:

"At 7 a. m. yesterday Gen. Jesus Aguirre, military commander of the state of Vera Cruz, communicated with the President of the republic stating that Col. Adalberto Tejeda, Governor of Vera Cruz, had started a suspicious attack in the port of Vera Cruz, taking mounted police with him; that a battalion of the garrison of Perote was also thought to be in rebellion, and that the fleet in the gulf was standing off from the port with team up.

Lulling Suspicion.

"The commander of troops in the state of Vera Cruz pretended in this way to be loyal to the Government, but he used the doubts thus created to facilitate the revolt plotted by him and other military leaders. The interruption of telephone and telegraphic communication, the sedulous reply of the commander of the garrison at Orizaba, the patriotic and decorous attitude of Gen. Jose Maria Dondantes, commander of the Seventh Cavalry Regiment, who immediately announced his loyalty to the Government and concentrated his troops at Oriental, and the action of the fleet asking instructions by wireless left no doubt as to the rebellious attitude assumed by Gen. Aguirre.

"At 10 a. m. yesterday Gen. Francisco Manzo, commander of troops in the State of Sonora, also telegraphed saying 'The Twenty-ninth Battalion in the command of Gen. Antonio Armenta had revolted and stating he was sending troops in pursuit.'

"This was another subterfuge, previously agreed upon, for Gen. Manzo, like Gen. Aguirre, is in open rebellion with part of the troops under his command fighting and pursuing troops that remained loyal.

Foreseen for Some Time."

"Although the situation thus developed had been foreseen by the Government for some time and although the plans of the revolt of Generals Aguirre and Manzo had been known publicly for several days, the Government did not wish to give any information which might help precipitate violent action, which it felt ought to be restrained at all costs.

"But in view of the imminence of the struggle the Government believes it is unnecessary to continue to keep silence—silence which would in no way serve to avoid the contest. It believes on the contrary that it ought to state the situation clearly to the nation so that the Mexican people may know the situation and the evolution of one of the most unjustified armed patriotic movements ever plotted.

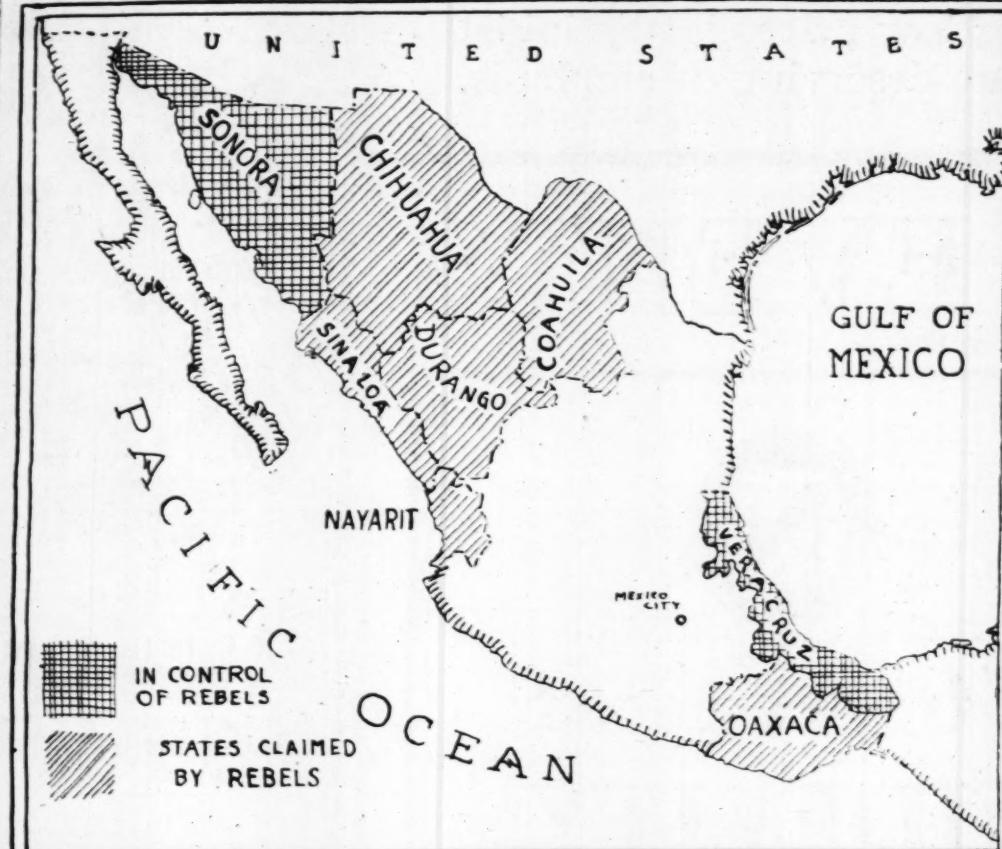

"With the beginning of the present political struggle in Mexico there immediately appeared indication of attempts by certain military men to impose candidates on the people. Far from trying to win votes by public appeal, they put forth ideas of violence and revolution. Certain military men manifested these aims and the Government was forced to take action against them.

Explains Removal of Gen. Cruz.

"This was the case of Gen. Roberto Cruz, who proclaimed that forces at his command he was ready to fight to right an imagined wrong. He was taking into account that he himself was the real wrong-doer. The Government thought it over lengthily before taking action against that commander despite the fact his antecedents were none too good, because it desired to avoid in every way possible suspicion that the change was made to nominate a commander who might be more pliable. (Apparently this refers to the recent removal of Cruz from the command of one of the military zones.)

"But his removal was made because the Government preferred to accept him as a possible tool for this change rather than to maintain a situation prejudicial to the country, the criminally tolerant attitude of keeping in office a military commander with seditious plans and allowing him to continue at the head of troops. This would have served only to disturb peace and bring new suffering to the country.

Why Others Were Let Alone.

"With respect to Gen. Manzo, in order to avoid the policy of changing commanders which was repugnant to ideas of Government, the Government contented itself with frequent appeals to his loyalty and by explaining to him that whatever might be the outcome of the political struggle the army should not participate in it nor be ashamed of backing 'the institutions' (meaning the system of Government) for these, although humanly imperfect would achieve progress because of the President's determination not to participate in any manner in the political struggle.

Therefore, when the reports concerning his plans always were received with reserve because his contact with the central Government left room for hope he would be convinced the Government would not participate in any political struggle. His reiterated professions of loyalty and his personal appearance before the Government on several occasions furnished reasons for believing he would live up to his past record as a member of the revolutionary group (meaning the group now in power) and that he might follow the line of duty clear before him.

Explains the Cause.

"The lack of reason for this sedition movement was so great that were it not for indiscretions of the commander of the troops in Orizaba the Government would find it difficult to explain to the nation this pretext given by the rebels.

"This is what the Gen. Aguirre with the troops at his command revolted against the position of Pascual Ortiz Rubio. (Apparently this refers to the activities of the National Revolutionary party at its convention at Queretaro, where Ortiz Rubio and Aaron Saenz were candidates for the nomination until Saenz abandoned the convention on the ground that the Committee on Registration was discriminating against his delegates.)

"The falseness and inconsistency of this pretext is evident. These candidates and even those of the opposition enjoy in a political campaign every class of the guarantees as they themselves have admitted, by their determination.

Federal and local authorities not to interfere in the elections has never been deviated from except by the authorities sympathizing with those now in revolt.

"This was the case of Gen. Fausto Topete (Governor of the State of Sonora), who accompanied his complete Legislature to Nogales recently to receive the presidential candidate, Gilberto Valenzuela, who apparently did not wish a democratic struggle, but rather the participation of the Government in an underhanded position. In view of the gravity of the situation, the President of the republic believes it his duty to bare his conscience to his fellow citizens."

Confident of Victory.

The President's statement goes to say he believes he has put aside as no other Mexican President ever had, his passions, and ambitions, and has remained absolutely outside the political struggle.

He continues to explain in detail all the local factors entering into the political equation and then concludes:

"The Government is sure it possesses strength sufficient to dominate the revolution in short time, not only because the greater part of the army has remained loyal, but because in districts where the rebels have broken out there are parts of the army which have not joined the rebels. Moreover, the Government is confident the force of public opinion is with it."

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly!

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrown nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it cannot penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

Satsuma Oranges

Some 30 years ago a resident of the Gulf Coast secured and put out a few Satsuma orange trees. The Satsuma is of Japanese origin, small, oblate, popularly known as the "kid glove orange." Many think it the most delicious of all oranges.

From the first, the agricultural workers of the L.N.R.R. were interested in the new fruit, hoping its cultivation would give to the Gulf Coast Regions, which the railroad so largely serves, a new and important orchard industry, and bring into use large areas of the unused lands. The railroad horticulturists studied the fruit, methods of propagating the stock, planting and cultivation, methods of fighting pests which might afflict trees, particular localities and soil best adapted for orchards, most valuable stock for commercial plantings, effects of very low temperatures on the trees, methods of marketing, and all that has to do with the development of Satsuma production.

BOY, 15, NOVICE AT DRIVING, ARRESTED IN STOLEN CAR

William Wittenberg in Pierce-Arrow Police Box Intended Driving to Chicago.

William Wittenberg, 15 years old, who says his home is in Chicago, was arrested at 4 p. m. yesterday as he was driving a stolen Pierce-Arrow automobile in the direction of the Municipal Bridge.

Two men, noting the boy's unkempt condition and the fact that he was experiencing difficulty in operating the machine, stopped him at Broadway and Chouteau avenue and then summoned a policeman. Wittenberg said he ran away from his home, 1181 Clarendon avenue, about three weeks ago. He is held at the House of Detention. The automobile was reported stolen from Eighth and Olive streets by Max Patti, 6301 Southwood avenue, a short time before Wittenberg was arrested. The boy said he intended driving the car to Chicago.

Police, noticing a machine with out lights being driven at Sixth and Market streets at 7 p. m. arrested Wittenberg and learned that the car had been stolen from the Cyrus Khouri Automobile Co., 2343 Chouteau avenue, a short time before. The driver, who described himself as Earl Woods, 1344 Chouteau avenue, was pronounced suffering from alcoholism at City Hospital. He is held.

KILLED BECAUSE BABY IS A GIRL

French Mother Slain by Husband, Who Then Ends Own Life.

Copyright 1929 by the French Post-Dispatch Publishing Co., New York World Publishing Co.

PARIS, France, March 3.—Baron, owner of the famous chateau Malson Brugnon, in the Department of Maine-et-Loire, shot and killed his young wife, then ended his own life with the same revolver. The wife was 22 years old. Four days ago, before the murder, her second child was born.

The family, vainly seeking an explanation of the crime, can only suggest that the husband was infuriated because the baby was a girl.

One of the farmers on the estate, who said Baron was nervous before the tragedy, says he was calm at the time. Ten minutes later he went to his wife's room and shot her.

FUNERAL SERVICES

FOR DR. J. M. BALL

Pastor and President of St. Louis Medical Society Speak.

Funeral services for Dr. James Moores Ball, nationally known occultist and writer on medical subjects, were held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the auditorium of the St. Louis Medical Society, 3839 Lindell boulevard, where the body lay in state from noon. The Rev. Edward S. Travail, pastor of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, spoke briefly, and a eulogy was delivered by Dr. Cleveland H. Shutt, president of the Medical Society.

Dr. Ball died last Friday after a 10-day illness. His body will be cremated and the ashes placed in the Army Museum in Washington, to which he presented his highly valued ophthalmological collection in 1922.

Author of three books, two histories and one a medical text book, Dr. Ball had completed a fourth volume just prior to his last illness. It is a treatise on "Art and Anatomy" and will be published by a firm in Scotland as soon as the proofs have been corrected. Dr. Ball was working on them as late as two days before his death and finished all but two chapters.

Honored by many European scientific societies, Dr. Ball was a persistent searcher into medical history, particularly in the realm of anatomy. Recently he presented a valuable collection of 450 old medical books to the library of the Medical Society.

RECORD OF SHOR OF 70TH CONG MAJOR TASI

Passage of Boulder Can and Ratification of E Outstanding Acco

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Members of the Seventieth Congress today can look back with notable legislative achievements during the last two years. Many bills of the incoming Seventy-first Congress, however, will find many important problems still unsolved. The short session ending today found three of the four major legislative problems on the program at the convening of Congress in December disposed of. These are the Boulder Canyon dam project, the Kellogg peace pact and the cruiser construction bill. The farm relief problem will go over to the special session, tentatively set for April 10, when it will be considered along with tariff revision and House appropriations.

When the last outstanding legislative accomplishments are joined with those mentioned, the record of the short session compares most favorably with other sessions, long or short.

Prohibition consumed a large part of the time of the three-month session. The Jones bill, increasing the maximum penalty for prohibition law violators to five years' imprisonment, $10,000 fine or both, became a law. The Harris amendment to the first deficiency bill to appropriate $24,000,000 additional for prohibition enforcement was defeated in conference after the Senate had approved the proposition.

Additional $2,975,000 Dry Fund.

As a concession to many drys, particularly in the House, who voted against the $2,000,000 item, the administration proposed an additional appropriation of $2,727,000 for enforcement, and approved the Glass proposal to appropriate $258,000 for an investigation under the direction of the President "of problems of law enforcement, including national prohibition."

When the Postoffice and Treasury Department appropriation was before the Senate, Bruce of Maryland, a wet, unexpectedly obtained the adoption of an amendment which would have increased the prohibition enforcement fund to $270,000,000. The amendment was rejected by Senate conferees on the bill, but when a roll call was demanded on adoption of the conference report, the bill narrowly escaped defeat because of the omission of the Bruce amendment.

In the House, Representative La Guardia, a wet Republican from New York, tried to amend the first deficiency bill so that it would appropriate $300,000,000 for prohibition enforcement. His amendment was defeated. Like Bruce, La Guardia, quelled by Post-Dispatch Commissioner Doran's statement that $300,000,000 would be needed to enforce the eighteenth amendment properly. Generally, the dry Democrats in both houses voted for higher enforcement appropriations, while the Republicans, wet and dry, voted against the proposed increases.

Nicaragua Canal Bill Passes.

Between debates on prohibition, Congress found time to pass several measures, left over from the long session. Among these were the Edge resolution for a survey of inter-oceanic canal facilities in Panama and Nicaragua, the Hawes-Cooper bill to regulate the interstate shipment of prison-made products, the Norbeck-Andresen migratory and conservation bill and the bill to end the life of the Federal Radio Commission. With the exception of the Hawes-Cooper bill, all these measures were approved after compromises had been reached to adjust Senate and House differences.

New legislation considered in the short session included the McKellar amendment to the first deficiency bill to require public hearings on large tax refunds; the recommendation of President Coolidge, first made in a letter published in the Post-Dispatch, for a rural retreat for the President, and several attempts to force withdrawal of the United States Marines from Nicaragua.

In response to President Coolidge's suggestion, an appropriation of $4,000 was made available for the remodeling of the old Weather Bureau Station at Mount Weather, Va., into a country place for Presidents. It was provided, however, that the actual expenditure should rest in the discretion of the President.

McKellar Loses Tax Fight.

McKellar lost his fight for public hearings on large tax refunds. At the instance of Secretary Mellon, conferees on the first deficiency bill whittled down the proposal until that remained was a stipulation that decisions on refunds should be made public after hearings had been held in secret. Likewise all moves to force the withdrawal of marines from Nicaragua were blocked by administration leaders in the Senate and the House.

My countrymen:

This is not alone the administration of the most sacred oath which can be assumed by an American citizen. It is a dedication and consecration under God to the highest office in service of our people. I assume this trust in the humility of knowledge that only through the guidance of Almighty Providence can I hope to discharge its ever-increasing burdens.

It is in keeping with tradition throughout our history that I should express simply and directly the opinions which I hold concerning some of the matters of present importance.

Our Progress.

If we survey the situation of our nation both at home and abroad, we find many satisfactions; we find some causes for concern. We have emerged from the losses of the greatest and the reconstruction following it, with increased virility and strength. From this strength we have contributed to the recovery and progress of the world. What America has done has given renewed hope and courage to all who have faith in government by the people. In the large view, we have reached a higher degree of comfort and security than ever existed before in the history of the world.

Through liberation from widespread poverty we have reached a higher degree of individual freedom than ever before. The devotion to an ideal for our institutions is deep and sincere.

We are steadily building a new race—a new civilization in its own attainments. The influence and high purposes of our nation are respected among the peoples of the world, but to a distinction based upon confidence in our sense of justice as well as our accomplishments within our borders and in our own lives. For

The special session will deal largely with farm relief and revision of the tariff. President Hoover has insisted that tariff revision be strictly limited. Seeks of special tariff privileges, however, have made strong demands at the House Ways and Means Committee hearings during the short session, and it is problematical whether the new President can control the votes of Senators and Representatives who will demand tariff favors for their constituents.

The Failure of Our System of Criminal Justice.

President Hoover's farm relief program as outlined during the campaign called for increased tariff rates on agricultural products; for Government loans to control seasonal and periodic surpluses, and for improvement of inland waterways to reduce the farmers' cost of transportation.

Shortly before election day, presumably as the result of efforts by Senator Borah, Hoover promised to call a special session of Congress if the farm relief legislation was not enacted at the short session.

Although Senator McNary introduced the old McNary-Haugen bill minus the equalization feature, the measure was not pressed in either House and the farm problem remains.

Despite Hoover's advocacy of improved internal waterways as a farm relief measure, President Coolidge refused to allow administration leaders to bring in the annual river and harbors authorization bill, on the ground that such action might cause a deficit.

The House "river bloc" accepted this usage and did not attempt to force action on a bill. Now was nothing done during the short session regarding Government loans to farmers.

Higher Tariff Is Sought.

High tariff industrialists took Hoover's promise for higher tariff rates on certain products to mean that there would be a general tariff revision of the already high Fordney-McCumber bill. But after a day, since the middle of January, experts have testified before the House Ways and Means Committee in an effort to show that only an embargo on foreign-made products, the Norbeck-Andresen migratory bird conservation bill and the bill to extend the life of the Federal Radio Commission. With the exception of the Hawes-Cooper bill, all these measures were approved after compromises had been reached to adjust Senate and House differences.

New legislation considered in the short session included the McMillan amendment to the first deficiency bill to require public hearings on large tax refunds; the recommendation of President Coolidge, first made in a letter published in the Post-Dispatch, for a rural retreat for the President, and several attempts to force withdrawal of the United States Marines from Nicaragua.

In response to President Coolidge's suggestion, an appropriation of $100,000 was made available for the remodeling of the old Weather Bureau Station at Mount Weather, Va., into a country place for President. It was provided, however, that the actual expenditure should rest in the discretion of the President.

McKellar Loses Tax Fight.

McKellar lost his fight for public hearings on large tax refunds. At the insistence of Secretary Mellon, conferees on the first deficiency bill whittled down the proposal until all that remained was a stipulation that made public hearings had been held in secret. Likewise all moves to force the withdrawal of marines from Nicaragua were blocked by administration leaders in the Senate and the House.

Senate Failed to Take Action.

The Senate failed to take action on the tax report. Senator Norris introduced a resolution of disbarment, but as Vare was reported to be too ill to defend himself in person on the floor of the Senate, the resolution was not called up for a vote. Vare was refused a seat temporarily when

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Leave Federal Building Where It Is.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE location for the new Federal Building should be one that will deliver "the greatest good for the greatest number."

Why should the Government pay inflated prices for land in the Municipal Plaza or elsewhere when it owns the most desirable and most practical location in St. Louis? Purchasing new sites will only serve to enrich a few.

The old Postoffice building offers the best location for the new Federal Building. The Eighth and Olive site is in the center of the business district, easily accessible, and it touches the Eads Bridge tunnel which will some day become a part of the contemplated subway system.

The new Federal Building at Eighth and Olive will enhance all downtown property. It will add life with five or 10 stories, and some department stores, and the remaining 10 or more floors will supply ample space for all the Government agencies and bureaus located in St. Louis.

During the construction of the new Federal Building at Eighth and Olive, the Postoffice could be transferred to the Customs House building at Third and Olive, or some other available buildings could be leased or acquired.

The Federal Building at Eighth and Olive can be made a show place and a landmark. Why should all new buildings be cluttered around the plaza?

After all, taxpayers must pay and why should they not have a voice in the selection of site for Federal Building which can be constructed into the most imposing and monumental building in St. Louis?

Our Government representatives in Washington will welcome any suggestions from the people. It will help them in selecting the best and most practical site.

The money that can be saved by using Government-owned property can then be used for wages to thousands of workers. If the Government must spend money on the new building, it should see that it goes in the construction work and not in inflated property values which will enrich only a few landholders.

The Budget System.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WILL you allow one who is much interested to plead with you to strike hard to help Gov. Caulfield put over the budget system bill? It is certainly time this machine politician, Becker, was sat upon.

S. F. VAN NORT.

A Renter's Tax.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN your issue of Feb. 26, there appears a letter from one signing himself O. R. Fair, charging that renters do not pay taxes.

In the first place everybody living in St. Louis and occupying a house does pay taxes; he pays rent to the landlord and the landlord pays taxes on the house. He also pays his personal taxes which are extra the same as with Mr. Fair. The landlords have their taxes raised $10 per year, and the tenants have their rents raised $10 a year. If that isn't paying taxes I don't know what it could be called.

O. R. Fair pays $60 per month taxes, or $700 per year. He probably has a nice seven or nine-room home in a good neighborhood; he enjoys the privileges of his own home; he has his investment there; he doesn't have his rent raised or anyone to tell him to move. Let's see what the renter has? The renter pays $60 per month for a 4-room upstairs flat, cannot have a flower bed or a few chick-ens or other privileges; can have his rent raised the while of the landlord, or can be forced to move on a 30-day notice.

I hereby solemnly state that if agreeable to O. R. Fair, I will kindly make my occupancy of the flat which I now occupy, for a clear deed to his home and also give him all my back rent receipts to boot. This offer to remain open indefinitely.

A Midweek Evening for Pop Concerts.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE Symphony Society justly complains of the lack of attendance at the Sunday "Pop" concerts and is considering their discontinuance next season because of the deficit involved.

Let me ask just why the "popular" that is to say, the apparently unpopular concert necessarily held on Sunday just for the day when most people want to take advantage of outside recreation? Then, again, if Sunday must be the day, why should the concert be held in the mid-afternoon (3:15 p. m.)? Between 1:00 or 1:30 and 3 o'clock many people are tempted to take an auto ride or a little game and then find that they are so absorbed or deficient in time that they simply let the concert go. Rather than keep people waiting with nothing to do until the concert, why not move the hour of the concert up so that people could take their riding after the concert.

Or why not have the popular concert on mid-week evening instead of on Sunday afternoon? Sunday is no longer a day for going around. Most people want to get out immediately after dinner and dinner is not a late afternoon function any longer.

MR. COOLIDGE SIGNS THE BILL.

Let it never be said again that Mr. Coolidge has not a sense of humor. The last sentence of his message of congratulations to the Post-Dispatch and appreciation of its campaign to provide a country retreat for the President near Washington has a fine touch of humor. It was sent upon his signing the bill passed by Congress. He said:

The Congress has shown an inclination to treat a President with the same kind of consideration it extends to our birds and other wild life.

The brief message is another revelation of the human side of Mr. Coolidge. It supplements his letter in the Fifteenth Anniversary Number of the Post-Dispatch, in which he suggested a retreat. That letter revealed a side of Mr. Coolidge's nature which was not suspected previously by the public. It appealed to the sympathy and affection of the people as nothing before had done during his official life.

The Post-Dispatch is quite willing to accept a tax increase if such is necessary. But first let us modernize our State Government, as Gov. Caulfield advises, and as other States have done with fine economic results. Let us also learn the actual condition of affairs throughout the State, and when we know the size of the job we can then determine upon the preferable plan for raising the money.

Gov. Caulfield, we are happy to say, is giving Missouri a real taste of executive capacity—the first this State has had in a long time. A mere politician in these circumstances, would have followed the line of least resistance by letting the Legislature increase the taxes. That is not the way of real leadership.

Safeguarding the revenue by efficiency methods, informing ourselves as to what must be done and then determining the best way to do it—that is real leadership.

The Post-Dispatch unreservedly rejoices at the presence of practical statesmanship in the Governor's office.

THE GOVERNOR'S PROGRAM.

Before piling more taxes on the people of Missouri, as the Bales-Elmer-Freeland bill proposes, Gov. Caulfield believes that, first, we should reduce operating expenses and, second, find out what the State's needs are.

The Governor would reduce operating costs by creating a department of budget, a central purchasing agency and consolidating related departments.

He would ascertain the housing needs of the State's educational and eleemosynary institutions by surveys conducted by commissions. With that information we should know the amount of money required.

It is Mr. Caulfield's opinion that such expenditures can be more economically provided for by a bond issue than an increase in taxes.

That is the Governor's program. It will be approved by citizens generally. It is so brim full of common sense that it is difficult to imagine any opposition to it.

The Post-Dispatch is quite willing to accept a tax increase if such is necessary. But first let us modernize our State Government, as Gov. Caulfield advises, and as other States have done with fine economic results. ## AN INVESTIGATION NEEDED.

Four persons said to be graduates of the Kansas City College of Medicine and Surgery have been licensed by the State Board of Health under circumstances which justify the request made by the Missouri State Medical Association for an investigation.

The Charter of the Kansas City College of Medicine and Surgery was revoked by the Missouri Supreme Court in 1923. The school was roundly criticized by Dr. F. C. Waite of Western Reserve University, who made a survey of medical conditions in Missouri for the State Board of Health in 1925. Dr. Waite said its graduates "knew it to be inefficient, or were such hopeless morons that they have no place in the medical mark."

The four licenses complained of were issued to Dr. Louis C. Schneider and Dr. E. C. Tubel of Kansas City, and Dr. B. T. Colglazier and Dr. Vera E. Kennedy of Joplin. It seems their original licenses were denied by the Missouri Board of Health because they had issued to them licenses to practitioners of other states having educational requirements equal to those of Missouri.

By reason of the record of the Kansas City school and the indirection used in obtaining Missouri licenses, Gov. Caulfield has every reason to delve into the subject for an explanation of the board's action.

The diploma mill scandals are so fresh in everyone's memory that it is hardly necessary to labor the point.

THE CASH OR THE CREDIT.

On the eve of his retirement, after eighteen colorful years, Senator Reed of Missouri advises young men not to go into public life if they expect to make money. "There is no financial reward," he remarks, "for honest public service."

The meagreness of material returns for official effort is well understood, but two recent instances emphasize that truth may be cited. Oscar Underwood's estate was estimated at something like $50,000—that is about half as much as Jack Sharkey received the other night for his pugnacious affair with Young Stribling; an affair tenderly free of blood, brutality or foul. Smaller still was Edwin Denby's modest tally of $28,000.

Yet the lure of office seems to be as potent as the lure of gold. Champ Clark once said that there were not 5000 men in the United States but would gladly be in Congress if they could get there. The story may not be strictly accurate, but the assertion is probably true.

But official life has its rewards. "Richer than silver," perhaps, "finer than much fine gold." Consider Senator Reed, patriarchal by the decree of anno domini, who in the legendary "sere and yellow" of 67 has the paesant figure of 21, walks with the springy step of the athlete in the glow of pink perfection, and mentally has all the punch, agility, enthusiasm and belligerency of battling youth. And in his eighteen senatorial years, when he might, in private life, have been amassing millions, he has had, according to the comptograph, a billion dollars' worth of fun.

First page, financial page, or want-ad page, we may all of us, as the shadows lengthen, find something of vindication in Chesterton's philosophy:

Ye blessed are the ears if they have seen.

Let the thunder roll on man and beast and bird.

And the lightning. It is something to have been.

SENATOR HEFLIN'S GAS POCKET.

The Japanese, who have proved themselves first-rate chemists, biologists and micro-hunters, take another scientific step forward, this time a politico-scientific step. Dr. Yutaka Kinugasa, director of the sanitary section of the Ministry of Home Affairs, announces his discovery, after due research, of a new species of microorganism.

Gov. Green of Michigan was besieged with protests against the barbarous disposition of this case, and, although the Anti-Saloon League fought desperately against it, he recently recommended to the Legislature that the code be amended to exempt liquor law violators. It is expected that the Senate will follow the example of the lower house and accept the Governor's recommendation.

In the meantime, however, what of those who are already in prison? Gov. Green would be less than logical if he did not commute those sentences, and the first person to be released should be Mrs. Miller. That is imperative if Michigan is to cease being ridiculous before the eyes of the nation.

Colorado, which is contemplating following Michigan's lead in sending bootleggers to prison for life, may now see the result of such legislative fanaticism.

HAMLET LEAVES THE SHOW.

High Tariff Diplomacy

While the hearing-room of the Ways and Means Committee is filled with applicants for tariff gravy, the Department of State is besieged with red-hot threats of reprisals from foreign countries if a higher tariff wall is reared, and the Department of Commerce knits its brows over the effect on American exports.

DREW PEARSON in THE NATION.

WASHINGTON, March 4.

IN the future the Senator or Representative sporting a tanned face in dead winter will not necessarily vacation at a Southern resort. More than likely it will happen within a few steps of his office at Capitol Hill.

For the ultra-violet ray has been pressed into service in Washington in the belief that it will play an important part in procuring better legislation for this country.

Members of Congress are to be subjected to artificial sun rays as often as they desire.

And the crowd, properly stimulated, will yell as loudly for the essential precious as for the effect on American exports.

Lewis Mumford is undoubtedly one of the finest critics we have.

It may be read more, but it may be granted that his "Herman Melville" will be illuminating.

Of Making M... JOHN G. NEH...

A Melville Revival? It appears now that Herman Melville, one of the least fortunate of first-rate writers, is about to be revived in a large way. Perhaps "revived" is hardly the word. It was as though some sinister planetary influence darkened everything he did, and many years before his death, even the little reputation he had won among the few was gradually forgotten. At the time of his death in 1891, The Critic, which was the most distinguished literary journal of the day did not even know who Melville was.

This writer remembers "discovering" Melville some five or six years after his death, and how though the stories seemed strangely enthralling, a guilty sense of reading something that was not quite respectable fused with what had been the joy of that experience. Unable to judge for himself, the young reader had simply caught, somehow, a vague going notion about Melville. The shadow that darkened the man's life still fell upon his books. It is true that within the past 10 or 15 years one has heard more and more fine things said of Melville's genius. "Moby Dick" has been read more and more, but undoubtedly many repeat the name of Melville without ever having enjoyed any of his work.

Perhaps it would be nearer right to say that Melville is about to come truly famous at last. Several years ago Macmillan published a fine study of Melville's life and works in the English Men of Letters Series; but it hardly reached the great public, for there was no ballyhoo campaign behind it.

But during this month there will appear a study of Herman Melville by Lewis Mumford, and no doubt it will "go big," since it is being sponsored by the Literary Guild of America. And if it "goes big," thousands upon thousands will suddenly discover an intense admiration for Melville's works, that they would not have had on a bet. The iron in the situation need scarcely be pointed out. However, there is no justification for cynicism. Being gregarious, we human beings can be moved most deeply in masses, and ballyhoo is amply justified when it can result in making us keenly aware of the works of genius. If thousands about together, the good news will be heard by those who are capable of genuine appreciation—and that is the only value in ballyhoo. Unfortunately, it is not generally employed to such an end, and the crowd, properly stimulated, will yell as loudly for the essential precious as for the effect on American exports.

Lewis Mumford is undoubtedly one of the finest critics we have.

It may be read more, but it may be granted that his "Herman Melville" will be illuminating.

STARTING off with a burial at the sea and winding up with the pleasing little matter of a man being killed by a gorilla, "Stark Mad," in the "Waterway," is one of those Grand Guignol horrors of collapsible Hoors, flying arrows, doors which open and shut mysteriously and madmen who pop in and out of the film at the most unexpected moments. Being, too, an all-talkie, the picture is punctuated with a fine assortment of blood-curdling shrieks and breath-taking moans and groans, but if that is the sort of a story you can enjoy you will like "Stark Mad," for it is all, even better than you could possibly imagine.

For the ultra-violet ray has been pressed into service in Washington in the belief that it will play an important part in procuring better legislation for this country.

Members of Congress are to be subjected to artificial sun rays as often as they desire.

And the crowd, properly stimulated, will yell as loudly for the effect on American exports.

The idea took hold from the start.

Senate Representatives have dropped in for a sun bath and declare they enjoy it hugely.

Florian Lampert of Wisconsin and Fred Zihlman of Maryland perhaps are to be found there more often than any of their colleagues.

Frequently they find opportunity to slip off from their offices and goggle before the machine.

Incidentally, one of the drawbacks to the fact that the patient must wear goggles is that they would be blinded by the powerful rays unless some protection were afforded. And the goggles spoil what otherwise would be a perfect sunbath.

A Melville Revival?

It appears now that Herman Melville, one of the least fortunate of first-rate writers, is about to be revived in a large way. Perhaps "revived" is hardly the word, for though the man's lifetime, it was as though some sinister planetary influence darkened everything he did, and many years before his death, even the little reputation he had won among the few was practically forgotten. At the time of his death, in 1891, The Critic, which was the most distinguished literary journal of the day did not even know who Melville was.

This writer remembers "discovering" Melville's Moby-Dick some five or six years after his death, and how, though the stories seemed strangely enthralling, a guilty sense of reading something that was not quite respectable interfered with what should have been the joy of that experience. Unable to judge for himself, the young reader had simply caught, somehow, a vague notion about Melville. The shadow that darkened the man's life still fell upon his books. It is true that within the past 10 or 15 years one has heard more and more fine things said of Melville's genius. Moby-Dick has been read more and more, but undoubtedly many repeat the name of Melville without ever having enjoyed any of his work.

Perhaps it would be nearer right to say that Melville is about to become truly famous at last. Several years ago Macmillan published a fine study of Melville's life and works in the English Men of Letters Series; but it hardly reached the great public, for there was no Melville campaign behind it.

But during this month there will appear a study of Hermann Melville by Lewis Mumford, and no doubt it will "go over big," since it is being sponsored by The Literary Guild. And if it "goes over big" thousands of the thousands will suddenly discover an intense admiration for Melville's work, that they would not now realize on a bet. The irony in the situation need scarcely be pointed out. However, there is no justification for cynicism. Being gregarious, we human beings can be moved most deeply in masses, and Melville is amply justified when he results in making us keenly aware of the works of genius. If thousands shout together, the good news will be known by those who are capable of genuine appreciation—and that is the only value in Melville. Unfortunately, it is not generally employed to such an end, and the crowd, properly stimulated, will yell as loudly for the essentially worthless thing as for the precious.

Lewis Mumford is undoubtedly one to the finest critics we have, and it may be taken for granted that his "Herman Melville" will be illuminating.

WASHINGTON

DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, March 4.

The future Senator or Representative sporting a tanned face in dead winter has not necessarily vacated at athern resort. More than likely he is within a few steps of his office on Capitol Hill.

For the ultra-violet ray has been pressed into service in Washington in the belief that it will play an important part in protecting better legislation for this country. Members of Congress are to be subjected to artificial sun rays as often as they can afford it at the House office, a contraption which closely resembles a police patrol call box has been set up in front of the person standing in front.

Two small doors in front throw out rays onto the person standing in front.

IDEA took hold from the start. Several Representatives have dropped in for a bath and declare they enjoy it. Wisconsin, Lampert of Wisconsin and Zimmerman of Maryland, perhaps are to be found there more often than any of their colleagues. Frequently they find opportunity to slip off from their offices and goggles before the machine.

Incidentally, one of the drawbacks is that the patient must wear goggles. They would soon be blinded by the power unless some protection were afforded. And the goggles spoil what otherwise would be a perfect sunburn. A tanned man with white rings around the eyes will probably keep many from utilizing the machine.

ANS Committee has had vociferous demands for tariff increases. This is the particular worry of the Department of Commerce.

The Department of State has an even greater worry. That Department is in the middle of a half dozen diplomatic negotiations with our Northern neighbor which is difficult enough without being further complicated by Canadian ill-will. Secretary Kellogg has been trying to persuade Dominion to proceed with the St. Lawrence Waterway, only to be informed that progress might be possible if the tariff on fish and fish was reduced. That was last summer. Instead of humoring the Canadian, the tariff is now to be increased.

Secretary Kellogg has also been trying to induce the Dominion to reduce clearances across-land to the United States, and to accept an infinitesimal number of radio wave lengths as compared with the number we use. None of these negotiations is enhanced by Canadian irritation over the tariff. Already Premier Taschner of Quebec has warned Prime Minister Mackenzie King that if Quebec does not get all the radio waves she needs, she will proceed to pirate the ether and take what she desires. Radio prohibition and the Lawrence Waterway happen to be three projects which vitally interest the man who is presidential candidate promised to "give a farmer the full benefit of our historic neutrality." As President and as his own Secretary of State, Mr. Hoover will no doubt get a taste of mixing the tariff with diplomacy.

"FRONT PAGE" DRAMA VULGAR AND POWERFUL

Story of Newspaper Life, Told in Strong Language, Thrilling Entertainment.

By H. H. NEIMEYER

WRITING on the thrilling acts and immensely entertaining acts with a line of spoken, or rather shouted indecency which is entirely unnecessary and which adds nothing to the value of the play "The Front Page," which came to the American Theater last night is, nevertheless, a powerful semi-comic drama of surefire showmanship. True there is considerable profanity scattered through the entire show and, here and there, bit of vulgarity, again not at all necessary, but it is not overly offensive until the manager, in editor, of a big Chicago newspaper, pays his respects to the parentage of his star reporter in a combination of words never before brazenly delivered on the American stage. Many persons, even in a Sunday night audience which is, supposedly, not over squeamish, will leave the theater with a bad taste in their mouths as a result of that tag line and, if it is continued nightly during the remainder of the week the audience, large or small, as the case may be, will be made up of cash customers more or less deliberately seeking a thrill.

IN plot and situations "The Front Page" is a semi-drama purely and simply, if one may use such an expression in the circumstances. In its dialogue it is out-and-out comedy. Perfectly played by a cast drawn true to life the result is a combination of thrills and laughs which is most effective, if entirely unimportant drama.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 4.

LADY of a modern Pepys Awake and in a frast over having to pay $9 for eleventh row theater seats plainly marked $6, albeit not for myself. To break fast of hominy cakes with sorghum molasses and Bernard Sobel outfitted me for the check.

So afoot about town and had a photograph taken for Aunt Betty who is the most charming lady I know. Then stopped at a theater rehearsal where a group of Maids sang chanting songs, monotonous fare being only briefly represented by a solo.

FOR obvious reasons, previous stories on Melville have given practically all their attention to the man's seafaring years, overlooking the last 40 years of his life. It is said that Mr. Mumford occupies more than one-third of his space with Melville's life from the time of "Moby Dick" onward, the first time any one has attempted to deal with this period at great length. In this connection, Mr. Mumford has treated as documents of first importance all Melville's literary works from "Pierre" down to the last portion of "Weeds and Wildlings," here again Melville's satire, "The Confidence-Man," and his narrative poem "Mare's," are examined, appraised, and minded for biographic material for the first time.

BALLYHOO FOR A MENDICANT. BY CARL TALBOTT (Horace Liveright).

Samuel Hoffenstein, who deserves wide attention with his very clever "Poems in Praise of Practically Nothing," has expressed enthusiasm for the collection of verse here presented. It can be questioned that Mr. Talbott is strikingly original, but there may be a question as to the value of his originality. He seeks his material in various bygone ages, and deals whimsically with various phases of human nature in terms of antiquity. This reader suspects that Mr. Talbott may have felt more in handling his themes than can the modern reader who is unacquainted with the curious and highly exceptional knowledge upon which the author based his whimsies.

HERE is one of Alfred Kreyberg's deliciously satirical "Park Avenue Lyrics" from his volume "Manhattan Men," just published.

Each Sunday night she gathers in Her sad-eyed repertory Of fiddlers, flutists, pianists And underfed tenors.

And one by one and two by two They pipe and sing and play With one eye on the music score And one on the buffet.

Arbors' Last Concert WITH THE SYMPHONY

Orchestra Displays Unwonted Warmth and Suppleness in Saint-Saens Number.

E. Fernandez Arbors concluded his engagement with the St. Louis Symphony orchestra yesterday afternoon, when he conducted the week's popular concert before a demonstrative audience. Most of the numbers were holdovers from previous programs and some of them sounded as if they had been put on without an additional rehearsal.

The audience also was partial to the prelude to the Spanish musical play called "The Wedding of Luis Alfonso" by the composer Gimenez. Judging from this music alone one would be inclined to say that the star reporter of the Exchange has turned his job and prepared to marry a nice girl and settle down in the advertising business in New York. His inability to shake off the news instinct when the murderer shoots his way out of the death corridor and the efforts of his managing editor to keep a born newspaper man in the atmosphere where he belongs make a fast moving comedy which revolves around the intensely dramatic escape of the condemned man. It is possible that the general public will not recognize the types which make up the cast of the characters in the play but they may take it from one who knows, the press-rooms of most crime and courts buildings anywhere in the country are inhabited by just such cynical, wise cracking young men as Ben Hecht and Charlie MacArthur. They can secure any make of car, manned by uniformed drivers, in a few moments, and thus avoid the burden and upkeep of a privately owned auto.

Wendell Holmes, sometimes called "the greatest living American," Their somber garb was in striking contrast to the multicolored uniforms of the Ambassadors and Minister across the aisle.

Curtis Greeted by Applause.

The Senate chamber presented an unwonted spectacle today. The comfortable red arm chairs, in which Senators are accustomed to loll in statesmanlike splendor, had been replaced by the small, straight-backed variety, packed together in long semi-circular rows. And still it seemed incredible that the small chamber would be made to accommodate the huge personnel of the House and diplomatic corps in addition to the Supreme Court and the army and navy staffs.

It was old to see Senators thronging in 30 minutes before the hour of convening. Today they were stiff and starched, for the most part. A conspicuous exception was the Senate's wealthiest member, Couzens of Michigan, who wore his customary business suit and soft collar. Norris of Nebraska also bore his usual homespun appearance.

The galleries were resplendent with notables. In the front row of the President's section was Frank Stearns of Boston, the silent friend of the silent President, enjoying a last taste of bowered glory. Across the aisle sat the Hoover boys, Allan and Herbert Jr., as alike as twins, and as sleek and clean-cut as collar advertisements. Mrs. Herbert Hoover was there.

New Cabinet Is Present.

The members of the Hoover Cabinet, excepting the two "holders," Secretaries Mellon and Davis, occupied a row of chairs at the side of the Senate chamber. Eight new members of the Senate also were present. Conspicuously absent was Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, who went to New York on business yesterday, and would not be present to see his old enemy inaugurated as President.

Visitors were treated to demonstration of the speed with which Congress can function when it wants to. They saw a bill (providing for the improvement of the Capitol plaza) passed by the Senate in less than 30 seconds, and sent to the House. Twenty minutes later, the clerk of the House reported the House had passed the bill. In an ante-room outside the chamber, President Coolidge waited to sign this and other last-minute legislation.

But while there was abounding good feeling and plenty of holiday spirit, the Senate was still the Senate, and consequently full of latent fight. It came to the surface the moment an attempt was made to concur in the House resolution postponing the operation of the national origins act.

Change in Immigration Act.

This immigration measure, enacted five years ago, would result in drastic curtailment of the quotas from Ireland, Germany and the Scandinavian countries, and in increasing the quotas from England and also from Italy and other Southern European nations. Much sentiment developed against the bill after its passage. Congress by resolution has postponed its operation for two years. As Secretary of Commerce, Hoover was one of a commission of three which investigated and reported the plan unworkable as well as undesirable. Both Smith and Hoover declared against it in the campaign, and yesterday the House adopted a resolution postponing its operation.

Action by the Senate was blocked, however, by Senator Robinson (Rep.) of Indiana. When it was brought up today, 25 minutes before the end of the session, Senator Reed of Pennsylvania bluntly served notice that he would filibuster against it. He said if it was necessary he would raise the point of order that the bill must be read aloud on three successive days before being subject to vote. It opponents soon surrendered when they saw Reed's determination.

An unusual aspect of the scene was the presence of two broadcasting booths in the chamber. They were built in triangular form to fit into the corners at the rear. The booths were elevated a couple of feet above the floor, and the announcers, two Washington newspaper correspondents, looked alertly out through their glass panels while they worked.

Because Afraid of Radio.

The plan to install the booths recently brought from Senator Col. Blease of South Carolina an apprehensive inquiry as to whether it would be possible to "use these contraptions to blow us up with electricity." His more cosmopolitan colleagues attempted to quiet his fears, but they still maintained an air of grim skepticism.

At 10 minutes before noon, the House of Representatives was announced. Speaker Longworth led the members in. He was followed by the erect and venerable dean of the House, the 85-year-old insurance, Henry Allen Cooper of Wisconsin.

But the spectacle did not reach its peak of splendor until the diplomatic corps appeared. It was headed by the British Ambassador, Sir Edward H. Grey, and a gorgeous sight he was—adorned with gold braid, his tricorne glittering with medals and decorations and his plumed hat carried magnificently on his arm.

The resplendent uniforms were as varied as they were magnificent. The Siamese Minister was conspicuous in an outfit of ivory white, overlaid with scarlet and gold. The Turkish Ambassador, with the fox, was the only person present with a head covering (if we expect the toupee of a few elderly Congressmen).

The black-robed Justices of the Supreme Court were announced next. Beside the portly figure of Chief Justice Taft moved the bent and aged form of Justice Oliver

Wendell Holmes, sometimes called "the greatest living American."

The dramatic contrast was heightened a moment later when the burly, thick-necked, powerful-looking President-elect took his place beside the little man whom he was to succeed within a few minutes. Hoover was smiling his grim business-like little smile.

About this time Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Hoover appeared in the Presidential gallery, the disparity in their sizes almost as striking as that between their husbands. Mrs.

The special committee to investigate presidential campaign expenditures also reported in the closing days that in the general campaign, Republican national and state organizations had spent $23,604 and that the corresponding Democratic organizations had expended a total of $7,152.51.

Earlier in the session, this committee reported that its records showed that the Hoover pre-convention campaign had cost $395,254, and the Smith pre-convention campaign $152,622. The committee recommended the enactment of legislation to regulate the conduct of national nominating conventions and the presidential primaries without specifying the form for such proposed legislation. No action was taken on the recommendation.

Fight Over West Nomination.

President Coolidge's nomination of Roy O. West of Chicago to be Secretary of the Interior caused a row which may lead to the liberalization of the Senate's rules on closed executive sessions. Confirmation of the West nomination was opposed by a group of Senators led by Norris and Nye, who believed that West's previous legal, political and business relations with Samuel Insull, utility magnate, should disqualify him from the position where he would be called upon to act on Insull's applications for water power permits and licenses.

The hearing on the nomination before the Public Lands and Surveys Committee was open, but the Senate debate on West's fitness for the office was held behind closed doors. The Senate even voted not to make public the vote on the nomination, which was eventually confirmed by a poll of $4 to 27. A press association correspondent obtained what was said to be a roll call of the Senators on the nomination and the vote became known despite the Senators' rules.

Norris and Nye unsuccessfully attempted to make the debate and the roll calls public. This, however, required a two-thirds majority, which they were unable to muster.

For New Rule on Secrecy.

Although Nye and Norris failed in their particular instance, their efforts and Senator Jones, one of the administration leaders, to introduce a resolution requiring a two-thirds majority for consideration of nominations in secret, a reversal of the existing rules. The Jones resolution was not finally acted upon during the session, but the Washington Senator announced he would press for action in the Seventy-first Congress.

One Senate investigation will go over into the Seventy-first Congress. Before and during the campaign, charges were made that Republican National Committee men in the South had engaged in the sale of Federal offices and had obtained control of state governments in exchange for votes of Southern delegations at national conventions. These charges were investigated by a committee headed by Senator Brookings, which was unable to complete its work during the Seventy-first Congress. This committee has been given authority to con-

Since the introduction of the Packard Six, forerunner of today's Packard Eight, $40,195,000 have been expended for facilities useful in the manufacture and distribution of Packard cars. Because of this huge expenditure incomparably better cars have been developed, step by step, and now are offered for less than half the price of the original Packard Six.

Packard has concentrated its millions and its experience on one name and on one ideal. The public has been most gracious in its support. And as Packard has prospered, it has shared its prosperity with those who buy its cars—giving better cars at constantly lower prices.

These new low prices follow the price reduction announced but a few months ago on Packard's Custom line. They afford the public a more favorable opportunity than ever before to have the many advantages and features found only in Packard cars.

When may we demonstrate these features to you? Your used car will be accepted as cash, and if of average value will more than make the down payment on a new car. Then—a profitable and enjoyable ownership lasting four or five times the payment period, an ownership more advantageous now than at any time during Packard's thirty years of fine car building.

he presented his election credentials.

The special committee to investigate presidential campaign expenditures also reported in the closing days that, in the general campaign, Republican national and state organizations had spent $423,604 and the corresponding Democratic organizations had expended a total of $7,152,511.

Earlier in the session, this committee reported that its records disclosed that the Hoover pre-convention campaign had cost $395,254 and the Smith pre-convention campaign $152,625. The committee recommended the enactment of legislation to regulate the conduct of national nominating conventions and the presidential primaries without specifying the form for such proposed legislation. No action was taken on the recommendation.

Fight Over West Nomination. President Coolidge's nomination of Roy O. West of Chicago to be Secretary of the Interior caused a row which may lead to the liberalization of the Senate's rules on closed executive sessions. Confirmation of the West nomination was opposed by a group of Senators led by Norris and Nye, who believed that West's previous legal and political and business relations with Samuel Insull, utility magnate, should disqualify him from the position where he would be called upon to act on Insull's applications for water power permits and licenses.

The hearing on the nomination before the Public Lands and Surveys Committee was open, but the Senate debate on West's fitness for the post was behind closed doors. The Senate even voted not to make public the vote on the nomination, which was eventually confirmed by a poll of 54 to 27. A press association correspondent obtained what was said to be a poll call of the Senate to vote on nomination and the vote became known despite the Senators' rules.

For New Rule on Secrecy. Although Nye and Norris failed in the particular instance, their efforts induced Senator Jones, one of the administration leaders, to introduce a resolution requiring a two-thirds majority for consideration of nominations in secret, a reversal of the existing rules. The Jones resolution was not finally voted upon during the session, but the Washington Senator announced he would press for action in the Seventy-first Congress.

One Senate investigation will go over into the Seventy-first Congress. Before and during the campaign, charges were made that Republican National Committee men in the South had engaged in the sale of Federal offices and had obtained control of Federal patronage in exchange for votes of Southern delegates at national conventions. These charges were investigated by a committee headed by Senator Broome, which was unable to complete its work during the Seventy-first Congress. This committee has been given authority to conclude its work after the adjournment today. The inquiry is said to have the full support of President Hoover.

U. S. Judge Is Accused.

Federal Judge Francis A. Winslow of the Southern New York District was impeached Saturday in the House by Representative La Guardia of New York and an investigation of the activities of Federal Judge Gross of Monroe of the Southern New York District was authorized. On the whole, however, the House acted in its usual routine way, and administration leaders relied on the smooth working steam roller, run by Speaker Longworth. Majority Leader Tilson and Chairman Snell of the Rules Committee, to defeat whatever proposals did not meet their approval.

The three House leaders put through a change in House precedent and custom which may affect the working of the steam roller. Speaker Longworth moved in order to postpone a report of a "rump" committee meeting on the Madden bill to lease the Muscle Shoals power and fertilizer plant to the American Cyanamid Co. over the protest of Chairman Morin of the House Military Affairs Committee.

"Rump" Report on Madden. Morin opposed the Madden bill and did not call a meeting of his committee on its regular meeting day. A majority of the committee met without call and approved the bill. Speaker Longworth recognized the favorable report and put the bill on the House calendar. Up to this time, the House custom had been that a committee chairman could control the committee meetings and in this way delay reports which he opposed. This was predicated on the fact that most committee chairmen work with the administration leaders. Under the chair's ruling, it will be possible under certain circumstances to defer the bill to the committee chairman. This, in effect, was a liberalization of the House rules.

There was no explanation for the leaders' action. Snell stated he would not allow the Madden bill to come to a vote in the House, and even had it passed the House, the Senate would have killed it. At the last session, both the Senate and the House passed the Norris-Morin bill for the Government operation of the Shoals plant, and President Coolidge gave it a pocket veto, the validity of which will not be determined until the United States Supreme Court decides a pending test case in which a similar veto is the issue.

Short Session Has Good Record.

Such is the major record of the short session. It will compare favorably with the record of the first session, which lasted twice as long, for no other reason than the appeal given to the Kellogg peace pact, the cruiser construction program and Boulder Canyon dam project.

The only measure passed in the first session really greater than any one of these three was an appropriation of $325,000,000 for Mississippi River flood control. The other important measures adopted in the first session were the $222,495,000 tax reduction program, including the repeal of the automobile tax; the raising of the pay of 125,000 Federal Civil Service employees; the immediate return of 80 percent of private property held by the Alien Property Custodian; the reduction of postal rates; the extension of Federal aid and appropriations for two years; the increasing of the capital of the inland waterways Corporation to $15,000,000; the passage of the Quincy, Ill., president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and by Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association. "The farmers have reason to believe that the Department of Agriculture will be able and fairly managed under the new administration," Thompson commented.

"With a whole-hearted spirit of cooperation between us I am certain your achievements in the Congress before us will redound to the immediate and ultimate good of all; your proceedings will be so much to your credit in the eyes of our people and so much to the credit of our people in the eyes of the world that they will stand for years in the future as the highest mark of legislative endeavor within, and perhaps without, the United States, it gives me pleasure, sir, to receive the gavel from you and to take over the duties of the Vice President."

TWO BOYS INJURED WHEN THEY TOUCH MATCH TO GUNPOWDER

Joseph Mertens Jr., 14 years old, 929 Utah street, and Alfred Fetto, 9, 3321 South Thirteenth street, were burned on the hands and face at 2 p. m. yesterday when one of the boys, who had been playing with gunpowder, which they had removed from old shotgun shells, in the rear yard at the Mertens home. They were treated at City Hospital.

SENATOR NORRIS, AUTHOR OF THE "RUMP" BILL, APPROVED IT. Senator Norris, author of the "rump" bill, said it was a good idea to substitute two sessions of undefined length, used this as an argument for his proposal. His amendment was enough to discourage the filibuster which threatened every short session.

Hoover seemed perfectly calm, and Mrs. Coolidge was her usual radiant smile for the world at large.

Text of Curtis' Address.

The text of Curtis' address follows:

"Senators: The United States Senate is today one of the most distinguished legislative bodies in the world—one of the greatest actual and potential powers for the promotion and advancement of civilization. Its personnel is of a caliber equal to, if not the superior of, any previous body heretofore assembled. Any individual, no matter how outstanding in the realms of leadership, political or otherwise, might well be proud to provide on his deliberations.

"I may, therefore, be pardoned in declaring here the feeling of pride which I experience that through my election as Vice President of the United States such a signal honor has come to me. I hope I may prove worthy of the people's choice, and of you. No efforts of mine will be spared to aid and assist you in the successful solution of the numerous intricate and important problems which will come before you."

"During the course of my 20 years' service among you, Senator from the State of Kansas, I have profited much from the wisdom, tact and experience of the members of this august body, as displayed by its most modest and unassuming members as well as by its most outstanding and brilliant leaders.

Pleasant Memories of Senate.

"My relations with the Senators during all these years have been pleasant. My memories of persons and events in this chamber constitute some of the most delightful in a long public life by no means devoid of disagreeable memories.

"At this point I must with propriety, I think, be permitted to offer to the honorable gentleman who is retiring as presiding officer of this body, Mr. Dawes, an expression of appreciation, admiration and esteem. We will all agree that he has filled his arduous and frequently onerous duties with credit and distinction, not only to himself but to the Senate and to the people of the United States.

"It would seem fitting also at this point to offer a word of welcome and greeting to our new Senators. They will find their fellow Senators, as I have found them, most human and kindly gentlemen, willing and anxious to help newcomers where they may.

"My service among you has impressed me with the responsibilities of every Senator, and at the same time it has given me a clear understanding of the duties and obligations of the Vice President.

Duty to Interpret Rules.

"He is not one of the makers of the law, nor is he consulted about the rules adopted to govern your actions. His obligations to the people of the country to whom he owes his high position and his duty to you Senators call for a fair and impartial construction of the rules which you, yourselves, have adopted and which you alone may change. His obligations and duties require a recognition and application of the precedents which have brought the United States Senate to its present recognized position of paramount importance as a legislative body.

"With the familiarity gained from long years of close observation, assisted by your full co-operation, without which little can be done, I hope to be able to sense your desire, certainly and surely, to obey your will, which is the will of the people; to give it effect with the utmost dispatch; and to expedite the business of the Senate in an orderly and speedy manner; for this I take it, is not only your desire but also the wish of our people. In effect to be an integral part of this body, not a being strange to or remote and detached from it.

"To do these things within the limits of my abilities I conceive to be the whole scope and sphere of the Vice President. The task is not easy. I ask your help and guidance.

"With a whole-hearted spirit of cooperation between us I am certain your achievements in the Congress before us will redound to the immediate and ultimate good of all; your proceedings will be so much to your credit in the eyes of our people and so much to the credit of our people in the eyes of the world that they will stand for years in the future as the highest mark of legislative endeavor within, and perhaps without, the United States, it gives me pleasure, sir, to receive the gavel from you and to take over the duties of the Vice President."

NURSE WHO KILLED POLICEMAN IN HOSPITAL GETS LIFE TERM

Denver Jury Convicts Farice King for Murder of Her Former Sweetheart.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., March 4.—Miss Farice King, 38-year-old nurse, who shot and killed her former sweetheart, Policeman John C. Bobzine, in the General Hospital, last Nov. 28, was found guilty of first degree murder by a jury here yesterday. The verdict carries a penalty of life imprisonment.

Miss King collapsed when the verdict was read. She was carried from the courtroom to her cell in the county jail, adjourned.

The story of the nurse and the man she killed opened in 1916, when their friendship ripened—on the part of Miss King—into love, counsel said. Her love abided after their separation during the war when Bobzine, known to her as Evans, was in the service, on through his return and through his marriage to another woman.

Continued brooding on this old romance sent Miss King into a "love mania," her counsel alleged, finally serving to unbalance her mind.

"Quickly Konjola Went to Cause of My Ailments"

St. Louis Man Freed of Suffering, After a Year of Fruitless Quest for Relief.

"O, that I could have had Konjola sooner!" How frequently this thought is expressed in the spoken and written endorsements of this celebrated medicine by those who have found in this super-compound their first and only relief from the pangs of suffering and disease.

MR. RUDOLPH CRETIN.

Only two months ago this amazing medicine was introduced in St. Louis, but already the news of its victories over the most obstinate cases has spread far and wide; daily throngs gather at the Walgreen Drug Store, 515 Olive street, where the Konjola Man is explaining how and why Konjola succeeds where all else fails to give relief in cases of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel troubles and in nervousness and kindred ailments. Konjola is a combination of performances—not promises. Its 32 ingredients, working together and individually, go at once to the seat of the trouble; the very source of the disease. Only a medicine that does this is worthy of the name. Konjola is not concerned with mere temporary relief; the mission of this modern remedy is to restore new and abundant health, lasting and glorious. The files of Konjola fairly overflow with experiences like that of Mr. Rudolph Cretin, 720 South Newstead Avenue, St. Louis. Beams of health, newly found health, happy life, free from suffering. Mr. Cretin said to the Konjola Man a few days ago:

"My only regret is that I did not have Konjola sooner, for when I took a treatment this master medicine quickly went to the cause of my ailments. For the past year I had been in a completely rundown condition, suffering from a complication of stomach, liver and kidney disorders. My food did little or no good; soon after each meal quantities of gas formed and I was often forced to vomit before getting relief. I was weak and lacking energy—hardly able to hold my position. Headaches and dizziness came from my liver and pains from my kidneys. Daily I got worse, and daily I continued my search for a medicine to reach my case. It seemed a hopeless task."

"But finally my diligence was rewarded. I came across an endorsement of Konjola, saw how it was working such wonders among St. Louis people and then decided to find out who was doing the work. I believe the first dose went to the cause of my suffering; for I began to feel better before the first bottle was finished. Daily I noticed a marked improvement and daily I gained strength and weight. I am now on the third bottle and actually feel like a different person. I have gained ten pounds; am free of stomach, liver and kidney troubles; work every day and never feel tired or worn out; have spread the good word about Konjola to all my friends; I will praise it as often as I possibly can, for I am convinced that Konjola is the master medicine—a boon to humanity."

Konjola needs no harmful drugs, narcotics nor alcohol. This super-compound is remedy that Nature herself might have compounded. Konjola brings health to old and young alike; it is the medicine for all the people."

The Konjola Man is at the Walgreen Drug Store, 515 Olive street, this city, where he is meeting the public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this master medicine.

found abandoned in the neighborhood.

A young woman rifled the cash register of the Lubrite filling station at 7128 Natural Bridge road at $68.71 while her escort kept the attendant busy greasing his Auburn roadster, George Casale, the station attendant, reported to Sheriff Lill last night.

The woman remained in the office a few minutes after the driver and Casale went to a nearby building across the car. Then she joined them and the pair drove away. When Casale returned to the office the register was open and a Negro who entered a shop at 1034 North Seventh street this morning, held up and tied John Hurich, a tailor employed there, and turned around just as Morris Buck, proprietor of the tailor shop, came in.

"You're just in time," said the Negro. "Come on back here."

He then tied Buck, took $45 and a watch from him, rifled Hurich's pockets of $3.50, and departed, after wrapping up five suits of clothing which he took with him.

When he protested against being robbed of $3.50, two Negroes near his home last night, James Ward, 63 years old, a city fireman, Ward, 63 years old, a city fireman, John Hurich, a tailor, was struck on the head. His scalp was lacerated.

Clement Murray, manager of Walgreen's drug store at 2729 Cherokee street, was held up by two men who took $350 from the safe and register.

Otto Hoefelmann, $114 Monroe street, Vinita Park, was robbed of $10 by two men who drove up beside his parked automobile, near Enright and Hamilton avenues.

Burglaries were reported at the following homes: Harry Kopman, 3655 Montana avenue, $400 in jewelry and clothing, $100 in cash; 4537 Illinois street, $100 cash and clothing, and jewelry valued at $500; Mrs. Rose Meuser, 4221 Iowa avenue, $55; George Ahrens, 3824 Oregon avenue, $37 and $125 in jewelry; Otto Meyer, 3149A Potomac street, radio and jewelry valued at $335; Joseph Goldin, room 5507 Easton avenue, $52.50; Charles Yaste, 4249 Nottingham avenue, $35 cash and $150 in jewelry; Richard F. ## APPETIZING DISHES WITH LEFTOVER FISH

These Recipes for Second-Day Dishes Fill a Long Felt Need.

A lesson that all housewives should learn is that leftover fish, left over meat, can be made into second-day dishes.

Indeed, many very delicious and attractive dishes may be prepared with the cold remnants of fish left from Friday's dinner. Directions for making several of these dishes follow:

LUNCHEON FISH CAKES.
Press four or five hot baked or boiled potatoes through potato ricer, add one and one-fourth cups flaked cooked fish, one-half cup salt, a few grains pepper and one beaten egg. Add one-fourth cup cream beaten until stiff. Drop from tip of spoon into hot deep fat and cook about one minute.
Drain on unglazed paper. Arrange on plates and garnish with small mounds of jellied relish.

CREAMED FISH.

Melt one-fourth cup butter, add one-fourth cup flour, one teaspoon salt, a few grains pepper, and a little black pepper, and blend thoroughly. Add two cups milk and stir constantly until smooth and creamy. Add two cups flaked cooked fish.
Reheat over hot water. Serve on toast or in rice or potato border.
Garnish with spiced beets or sliced cucumber pickles and crisp parsley.

FISH TIMBLES.

Mix one cup flaked fish, one cup hot crumb soaked in one-quarter cup milk, one-half teaspoon salt, few grains of pepper, one cup mashed potatoes, one egg and one-quarter cup milk. Beat well. Decorate small, buttered timbale molds with bits of canned pinquito, fill with the first mixture, set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until firm.
Turn out on a hot platter. Garnish with watercress and serve with tomato sauce.

THE CHILD'S CRAVING FOR SWEETS IS NATURAL

Recipe for "Confession That Is Particularly Good for Children."

The child's craving for sweets is perfectly natural, and is simply one of the means that nature has taken to assure that he will consume enough energy food to support his almost ceaseless physical activity.
Sugar of any kind is one of the quickest energy-producing foods that we have, and a moderate amount of foods containing some form of sugar should be a regular part of every child's diet.

Sweets are supplied by sugar, honey, dried fruit, candy, jams and jellies, molasses, etc.

An excellent confection for children that will satisfy this craving for sweets can be made by chopping together prunes, dates and figs, and mixing them to a smooth, very thick paste with the addition of strained honey and a little orange juice. This paste is either shaped into small balls, or packed out and cut in squares and rolled in powdered sugar or dipped into melted sweet chocolate.

Sugar in fruit supplies a large percentage of easily digested sugars of energy, food that is necessary for the blood, and of the vitamins needed for good development.
In addition, it has good laxative qualities.

SNACK OF PLANNING MEALS IS WORTH CULTIVATING

Many Housewives Study the Art of Planning and Serving Meals.

Planning and preparing meals cannot be a haphazard sort of thing and be successful—it is a real job. A truly appetizing dinner is the result of a well thought out plan. Every day's dinner should be thought out as part of the whole meal plan. In this way, it is easy to build up a table made of seven parts so that marketing, preparing meals and using left-overs will be a simple matter.

It must be kept in mind, however, that such a plan should be more or less flexible, since there are many things that may come up to change it—unexpected guests, sudden changes in market supplies, etc. However, with a regular plan of some sort menu making, meal preparing can be made a more interesting and much more worth while thing.

RICE AND MEAT BALLS

A Tempting Way of Preparing Leftover Meat or Food.

An interesting variation of the simple meat ball is called Rice and Meat balls. The recipe calls for two cups cooked ham, lamb or bacon, chopped fine, one-half cup gravy, three tablespoons fat, three tablespoons butter or drippings,
one tablespoon minced onions,
one-half teaspoon pepper, one cup, one and one-half cups cold boiled rice, one-fourth cup grated cheese, one tablespoon minced green pepper and one teaspoon salt.

Add gravy to meat; mix and chicken with flour and fat; which have been rubbed to a paste. Add remainder of ingredients and mix well; shape into balls, put in greased dish; add one-half cup water and bake in moderate oven about 30 minutes. Serve with mashed potatoes.

Endive and Radish Salad.
Pick over, wash and slice radishes;
drain and dry thoroughly, and slice radishes thinly, being careful not to cut through embryo, so that they will retain their shape. Use three for each service; serve on a bed of endive and serve with French dressing.

VEGETABLES GIVE LIFE TO MEALS

Fresh Greens Are Always a Welcome Addition to the Diet.

There was a time when vegetables and green foods were regarded as medicines and used as such. To certain extent this view is still held, but our newer knowledge of nutrition shows us that the best use of this group of foods is as a prevention of sickness, rather than as a cure for any particular ills. We all know what a welcome addition fresh greens are to the diet at this time of year, and how good the first rhubarb tastes; the gustatory delights of crunchy celery, crisp lettuce, peppery watercress, and savory young onions.

In speaking of the need of such things in the diet Dr. Woods Hutchinson, who is one of our authorities on the subject of diet, says, "We know now that certain of these extras are among the famous and well-named 'spark foods' which load the stomachs needed to touch off the fuel glands and make the body absorb them promptly and efficiently. . . . Almost equally important, these foods have a fresh vigorous taste which gives a fillip to the appetite—a quality that is often lacking in the cooked forms of certain staple foods which, like some humans, are strong on worth and merit but a trifle short on personal charm."

While a certain amount of raw vegetables should be used to add both variety and the right nutritive qualities to the diet, there is a large group of vegetables that must be cooked. The "personal charm" of many of these can be greatly enhanced by proper cooking.

Experiments have been recently carried on in the New York State College of Home Economics to determine the best way of cooking vegetables so as to give the best results so far as appearance and nutritive qualities are concerned. As a result it was determined that vegetables cooked in boiling water in an open kettle, and cooked just long enough to make them tender, were better in appearance and flavor and retained more of their mineral and vitamin contents than when cooked in other ways.

Spinach, Brussels sprouts, green beans, etc., boil in fact any green vegetable will stay green when so cooked. When green vegetables lose their color in cooking, it is due to too much heat and to the presence of acid. When the vegetables are cooked in a covered kettle, the volatile acids which they contain condense on the lid of the kettle and drip back on the vegetables, turning them olive green. When the kettle is uncovered, these acids escape in steam.

All green vegetables with the exception of spinach should be cooked in enough water to cover. Spinach should be cooked with the smallest possible amount of water.

Serve a fruit cup as a first course. This is always good as it can be prepared far ahead of time and kept in the refrigerator until ready to serve. This time of year it is good made of diced oranges and either fresh or canned pineapples. Sweeten the fruit very slightly with powdered sugar, and flavor it with a little lemon or fresh lime juice.

The second course may be served all on one plate and consists of creamed chicken, crab meat, shrimp or tuna fish poured over small hot baking powder biscuits, and served with green peas. Garnish the creamed mixture with narrow strips of pimento and small sprigs of parsley.

Serve celery and olives as relishes and for dessert a frozen mixture or a latte whip.

COOK TO MAKE NUT BREAD

This Quick Bread is Being Generally Used for Sweet Sandwiches.

A good recipe for nut bread is one of the convenient recipes to have handy at all times. Nut bread makes delicious sweet sandwiches to serve with afternoon tea or for luncheon or to put in the children's lunch box.

An easily made nut bread calls for three cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth cup sugar, one cup nut meal, two eggs, one and one-half cups milk, three tablespoons soft butter or other shortening.

To the sifted, dry ingredients add nuts, butter, unbeaten eggs and milk. Mix to a smooth dough, turn into well greased loaf pan and let stand 15 minutes. Bake in a moderate oven 45 minutes.

NOURISHING CREAM SOUPS

Encourage the Habit of Serving This Wholesome Type of Food.

The cream of vegetable soups make simple nutritious luncheon dishes that are satisfying and hearty.

Occasionally, however, we find that these curds or separate in the making on account of the acids present in the vegetables. This is especially true of tomatoes. There is less likelihood of this happening if both the vegetable pulp and the milk are hot, and the vegetables added to the milk. The combination should be made slowly, and the mixture stirred constantly.

Soup that has curdled has the same food value, but is of course, far less attractive in appearance.

The Fruit you buy at Kroger's is grown in that section of the country known to produce the best. It is picked only at maturity and canned immediately to preserve all natural flavor. Carload lots are sent us direct. Personal contact with grower and packer doubly assure quality.

Eat Vitamins.

SALAD DRESSINGS

THIS IS THE LAST CALL FOR DRIED FRUIT DISHES

For Spring and Summer Bring Fresh Fruits in Abundance.

Almost any of the dried fruits can be used to make very simple and appetizing desserts that are especially suited for children.

For instance, a fruit whip may be made from either prunes, peaches, apricots or figs by stewing them first and then rubbing the cooked fruit through a strainer, sugar, or honey is added for extra sweetening. Then for each cup of pulp, add one egg white and beat with an egg beater until very light and fluffy. Pile in sherbet cups, chill and serve with a slice of plain sponge cake or lady fingers.

Dried fruits contain a high percentage of sugar in a form that can be easily used by the system; they are also rich in calcium which is needed to build firm bones and strong teeth; in the iron that is so necessary for good red blood, and in the phosphorous that goes into the formation of bone, muscle and nerve cells, and which makes it possible for the calcium to be fully used.

Most of the dressings, to be sure, are developed either from mayonnaise or plain French dressing. However, we have in addition to these a bacon dressing which is delicious served with spinach or dandelion salad; a sour cream dressing that is distinctly characteristic; and a boiled dressing that is really based on the white-sauce foundation.

Most people today prefer to buy one of the good standard brands of mayonnaise rather than take the time and the risk of making their own. Whichever way your preference lies, the main thing is to keep a supply on hand to use as the occasion requires. Plain mayonnaise is suitable to use with chicken or meat salad, with hard boiled eggs, with mixed vegetables and with most fish salads.

Mayonnaise thinned with fruit juice is slightly sweetened, may be used with fruit salad.

Mayonnaise to which chili sauce is added to make a Russian dressing is good with eggs, with shredded cabbage—with sliced pineapple and with asparagus.

Most meat, fish and vegetable salads are much improved in flavor if they are mixed first with a well seasoned French dressing before adding mayonnaise.

French dressing makes a base for a great many variations. It is best made by mixing together one-half teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of pepper, one-fourth teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, a pinch of sugar (less than one-quarter teaspoon), one tablespoon of vinegar or lemon juice and four tablespoons of oil. These should be beaten together with a silver fork until thoroughly blended. A plain French dressing is ideal to serve with watercress, plain lettuce, romaine, endive or any of the greens. Many people like the flavor of a small amount of garlic.

French dressing made by omitting the Worcestershire sauce, doubling the amount of sugar, and adding a tablespoon of any fruit juice, such as orange, orange, strawberry, etc., is preferred for fruit salads by those who are connoisseurs of flavor. Such people consider it almost a crime to spoil the delicate flavor of fruit with a heavy whipped cream dressing.

Sour cream dressing is perhaps the best to serve with cole slaw,

Many prefer it for breakfast to the solid fruit.

Grapefruit juice is as delicious as orange juice as a breakfast drink, and may be combined with other fruit juices or syrups in countless delicious beverages. Indeed, there is much to be said on the side of extracting grapefruit juice and using it as a drink instead of the more fussy plan of "scrapping out the pulp as a table fruit."

Here too, improvement has been made in a new kind of cover which presses down on the entire inner circle of seeds and pith, and with one motion removes all, leaving a clean neat cavity in the grapefruit.

SCRAPPLE FOR BREAKFAST

Buy It at the Meat Counter or Else Make It at Home.

Scapple is made by combining cornmeal mush with scraps of pork and appropriate seasonings. It is a good cold weather dish, as it is hearty, wholesome and filling.

It makes an excellent hot breakfast dish and is especially palatable when served with slices of apple that have been sautéed in bacon or sausage fat until tender.

The apple aids in the digestion of the pork in the scapple, and adds some of the minerals necessary to balance the dish.

PEPPERS AND CABBAGE

Shred a small head of new cabbage and cook in boiling, salted water until tender. Place six green peppers directly over a slow heat and toast them, turning often, then scrape off the blistered skin, holding the peppers under cold water. Remove the seeds and cut in long, thin strips. Blend three tablespoons each of butter and flour and three cups of milk, heat in a pan and cook the peppers in it until tender, then add the cabbage and season with two teaspoons of salt and a quarter of a teaspoon of pepper. Blend well and then thoroughly heated serve at once.

ADD MUSHROOMS FOR VARIETY

Remember that variety is a necessity in planning appetizing and attractive meals. Variety in flavor can often be gotten by a combination of small amounts of several foods.

Mushrooms are one of the best foods to use in this way, as a small amount of them is all that is needed for flavor. Cultivated mushrooms may be bought for about 50 cents per pound, or the domestic canned mushrooms can be used in the same way.

SCHANG JOINS BROWNS AND ASSERTS HE WILL BE ACTIVE AGAIN

BROKEN ANKLE AS GOOD AS EVER, CATCHER TELLS MANAGER HOWLEY;
KRESS ON WAY TO FLORIDA CAMPBy John E. Wray, Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 4.—Wallie Schang, with his 5 feet 9 inch frame generously upholstered with fat, joined the Browns' squad here yesterday, after having been a mild holdout. Wallie was due here with the other pitchers and catchers of the first squad, but was delayed until his contract tangle could be settled.

Last season Schang, always a mainstay of the crew, was a non-factor, and a broken ankle and was out for the remainder of the year, of course. The enforced lack of activity for several months following contributed to building a nice pair of jowls, and also an incipient watermelon on the Schang front that will have to be worked off by hard and bitter effort. Schang is 38 years old, and any athlete of that age knows how taking off 15 pounds of overweight can punish the unfortunate victim.

"Plenty of buckwheats and sausages in the winter helped put the overstuffed arrangement on me," Wallie explained to Vice President McEvoy.

Says Ankle Is Sound.

"But I am O.K. again. My ankle is as sound as ever. I'm no cripple and don't want to be put in that class until I have a chance to show myself. I'll be as good as ever this season."

Manager Howley is counting on Schang, as usual, for his main catching support. Schang caught 91 games last year before his misfortune overtook him, and he hit .351, a very nice figure as catchers go.

Schang, although he has had a long career, has, to the present time, remained a fine catcher and a good hitter. His record has been brilliant, indeed, and he figured prominently in the fortunes of the Philadelphia and New York American League clubs before he came to the Browns. At one time it was a nation-wide belief that Schang was the best receiver in the American League. It is interesting to note that both are still active, and worthwhile assets.

Brown Need Schang.

Manager Howley is deeply interested in Schang. In fact, there is something of a gamble in connection with the receiving department this year, and Schang's return to form at the age of 38 is one of the guesses. Without his services the team will be left with Clyde MacCracken as the only available regular, proved receiver. Then will remain Rick Ferrell, the $25,000 free agent bought by the Browns during the winter; Ike Danning, a New Haven club graduate, and Harvey Johnson of the South Atlantic League. Many a manager would shiver at the outlook. It cannot be expected that Danning and Johnson can come through in major league fashion their first time up. With Schang out, this would leave Ferrell, who still must prove his quality, and MacCracken the holder.

The return of Schang to form is therefore absolutely essential. Broken ankles are stubborn. Schang says that he has tried out his leg and is satisfied that there is nothing the matter with it now.

His difficulty in signing with the Browns naturally can be traced to the management's reluctance to sign at high salary an asset of unknown soundness.

Kress on Way to Camp.

It was announced yesterday that Ralph Kress was en route to West Palm Beach. That relieves some anxiety. With Kress failing to report for an early return the shortstop situation would be up to Dondro, who lacks experience.

Dondro has made a hit here, but with Manager Howley there is seemingly no doubt who is set for the regular job. Howley thinks Kress, one of the greatest shortstops in the game and expects him to regain the batting form which he displayed early last season.

Threatening weather has per-

Youngstown Golf Star Winner in Belleair "Open"

By the Associated Press.

BELLEAIR, Fla., March 4.—A youngster from Youngstown, O., has stepped into the limelight of golfdom. Tommy Raklets, 23-year-old professional, is the new top notcher by virtue of a brilliant 278 score which won the Florida West Coast open championship here yesterday.

Shooting steadily throughout the entire 72-hole contest, Raklets came home two strokes under par. Three strokes behind him was his nearest rival, Billie Burke, the North and South open titleholder. Louis Chiappetta of Hartford, Conn., was third with 285.

Far behind the youthful winner trailed a long list of veteran stars, including such masters as Gene Sarazen, Johnny Farrell, Leo Diegel and Walter Hagen. Of these, Sarazen was second, the fourth with 287, a fourth place, while the others were strewn behind in the nine-overs or higher.

Raklets joined the ranks of the professionals five years ago at the age of 18 and this is his first championship victory. He took $1000 first money, while Burke got $750; Chiappetta $500 and Sarazen $400. Other awards ranged down to $25, major league first-sacker.

Ready to Sign 1929 Contract

DAZZY VANCE.

RIDDICK WILL ASK S.B.A.C. TO ENTER TODAY

By L. A. McMaster,

Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

AVON PARK, Fla., March 4.—

Three days' training without a practice game is all the Cardinals will have before they play their first spring exhibition engagement against the Philadelphia Athletics here Thursday. When the infielders and outfielders join the battery men today for the first time they will have only half a week to prepare for battle with the club that ran second in the American League last season.

Manager Billy Southworth believes the athletes will be better than the day they put in their time at pickup games. For the days will be spent in continuous running and throwing, with batting practice tossed in and, therefore, the team will be getting real exercise. Four hours of hard work each day will get the men into condition, Billy says, whereas practice games would waste their time.

He points out that a third baseman may field only one grounder

in two-hour game and an outfielder handle no play at all, so why waste the afternoon?

One third baseman put in an appearance today and no outfielder came in time for the first workout. Jim Bottomley, slugging first-sacker, and Andy High, third baseman, were the leftovers from the 1928 championship infield to show up. High got in late yesterday afternoon and Bottomley this morning. The other arrival was Carey

Selph, second baseman from Houston, who hopes to turn Franklin

Frish into a self-made third baseman this season, in order to leave the keystone job for the young man from Texas himself.

Chairman Harry A. Riddick of the district registration committee figured that the elimination rounds of Thursday's competition will provide a total of 22 contests, with each field entry, while the championship finals will furnish eight more events, making a grand total of 32 bouts. Riddick expects additional entries.

Mickey Adams, last year's welterweight title winner, advised district officials that he will be unable to compete in Thursday's tourney. Adams is employed at night and he reported that he will be unable to arrange with his employers to obtain a leave of absence.

His failure to enter leaves but two local representatives in the welterweight class. They are Louis Vol-mer of the Business Men's A. C.

and Horace Krause of the Flori-

Olympia, A. C.

Chairman Riddick will confer tonight with official of South Broadway A. C. in an effort to persuade that organization to send a representative team into the meet. Carl

Schaeffer, a featherweight, is the only South Broadway scrapper who has filed entry to date. It has been rumored that Cliff Doetzel, last year's flyweight champion, and

Freddy West, the featherweight titholder, will not participate in the meet. Both boys are members of the South Broadway team. The South Side club also has a classy bantam in Johnny Quirk and a promising pair of featherweights in Freddy Kaiser and Randall Melton.

MAYBE HITTING THIS YEAR.

"As I have said, we will have a real hitting outfield this year. We finished last year with only two hitters in the .300 class and still had third. This year I look for Schutte to hit .325. Fred Frank-

Gowan, who played only 47 games, was one of the .300 hitters.

He batted .363 while he was with us and, of course, that will be a big help if he can come through with such hitting this year.

The infield is greatly reinforced and I think I have two fine young men in Grimes and Dondro. If Grimes comes through as a hitter, we will be happy to have him.

The Thorpe team from Cincinnati, which placed a sterling brand of baseball here yesterday,

but fell short of defeating the Jewish Community House cagers in a fast game, the home team winning, 32 to 29. Not until the final gun were the Cincinnatians assured of their eighteenth straight victory.

Mike Hamak, former Penn State was the high point man of the opening half of the game, with the second half being dominated by the Thorpe team when the half period arrived, the score being 14 to 12 in Thorpe's favor. The opening of the second half found the Thorpe team bombing the basket with regularity, but the tightness of the defense on the part of both outfielders soon stopped the basket shooting and Cincinnati had increased its lead by only one point as the third rest period was reached, the score standing at 24 to 21. The quintets played on even terms the remainder of the game, each getting eight points.

Irving Fisher Discusses

Business Stabilization And Credit Diversion

Yale Economist Says Present Situation Involves the Threat of "Tight Money" for Current Business.

By IRVING FISHER,
Professor of Economics, Yale University.

It is interesting to remark the vigor with which the board now addresses itself to the task of regulation, even though it is applied only to a field in which it may have little justification for entering.

Much is to be said in favor of letting the stock market alone to find its own levels as a legitimate part of business.

It is believed that the recent rise in rates in Wall Street has actually attracted three large sums which otherwise would have been kept as working balances for general business.

The country has lost half a billion in gold in re-establishing the currencies of European and other nations.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Conn., March 14.—More than one respects the statement of February 6, last, by the Federal Reserve Board in regard to speculative credits advanced by Federal Reserve banks was epoch-making. The Board for the first time asserted emphatically its responsibility and authority to manage the credit facilities of the system in the interests of commerce and business.

"When it (the Board) finds that conditions are existing which obstruct Federal Reserve banks in the effective discharge of their function of so managing the credit facilities of the Federal Reserve System as to accommodate commerce and business, it is its duty to inquire into them and to take such measures as may be deemed suitable and effective in the circumstances to correct them, which in the immediate situation are likely to restrain the use, either directly or indirectly, of Federal Reserve credit facilities in aid of the growth of speculative credit."

Stocks Tumbled.

This statement, which has since been endorsed by the Advisory Board, demonstrated the power of the Federal Reserve Board. Brokers loans had risen to the record total of $6,736,000,000. That represented a $1,350,000,000 increase in the two months preceding July, 1928, and, in addition, to the sum of $46,000,000 for July, 1928, to February, 1929. The sum of loans for stock market speculation was growing weekly. Suggestions and warnings by the board last year had been but hazy headed. The letter to the Reserve banks dated Feb. 2, defining their obligations as to what credits should and should not be granted at this time, showed "teeth."

Everybody knows how stocks went tumbling the best and the worst throughout the entire list. The board means that.

"The Federal Reserve Act does not, in the opinion of the Federal Reserve Board, contemplate the use of the resources of the Federal Reserve Banks for the creation or extension of speculative credit; for example, Prof. Gustav Cassel of Sweden and Prof. James H. Rogers of the University of Missouri go so far as to scout the notion that stock speculation can have any great effect in tightening money for trade and production.

It must not be overlooked that a change in the rates of discount will have less influence on the stock market than on business generally.

Speculators are after such big gains as the rise of a per cent or two in the rates of pay on loans means very little to them.

It is believed that the recent rise in rates in Wall Street has actually attracted three large sums which otherwise would have been kept as working balances for general business.

The present situation involves the threat of "tight money" for current business, as is observable in the building industry. The last six years of prosperity, for which the Federal Reserve Board rightly assumes a measure of responsibility, has witnessed an expansion of the basic industries that made special drains on credit resources. Also, there has been tremendous loaning abroad. Further, as the Federal Reserve statement observes, the country has lost half a billion in gold in re-establishing the currencies of European and other nations.

The board's statement is epochal in the emphasis it places on the fact, however explained, that the gold basis of the nation's currency is no longer more than sufficient for business needs.

Loans Called.

When the board thus speaks of the steady influence of its policies and credit control on business, it acknowledges the influence assigned to it by Prof. Kemmerer and others of the Stable Money Association in stabilizing dollar purchasing power. It is interesting to remark the vigor with which the board now addresses itself to the task of regulation, even though it is applied only to a field in which it may have little justification for entering.

Member banks are informed that they must give first place to business loans and should not borrow to support speculation in stocks.

COTTON CLOSES STEADY WITH PRICES MIXED

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, March 4.—Further advances met a somewhat equal of resistance today, but it was absorbed on most contracts, and the market closed 10 to 20 points net higher in the early afternoon on covering and round Western and World War I cotton, which had been promoted by complaints of further devaluation of the dollar and a favorable interpretation of the inaugural address. Trading was slow.

Futures closed steady. 13 points higher to a low of March 20, 65.67, May 20, 66.00, July 20, 66.25, September 20, 66.50, October 20, 66.75, December 20, 67.00, and December 1929, 67.25, steady; middling.

The cotton market opened 7 to 10 points higher on continued covering by trade or speculative shorts in the old crop position.

There also was a little buying on reports of a 20-cent rise in May and 10-cent for the early crop, but the volume of business tapered off rapidly.

Reports of a tightening spot basis from the cotton code trade contributed to the positive advance.

Spinning and textile mills in Liverpool said trading and continuous buying had been reported by a fair cloth dealer in India.

Reports that sales of fertilizer for the seven months ended with February 28, 1928, totalled 1,728,251,000 bags, 1,000 lbs., probably were responsible for the high cotton market.

Bearing tapered off somewhat on the high cotton market, but was still strong.

The market at midday showed positions of 3 or 4 points from the best.

$1,110,000 SPENT
IN NINE YEARS ON GRADE CROSSINGS

Delmar, Fourteenth and Penrose-Kingshighway Are Major Projects Completed by City.

St. Louis voters, in the bond issue elections of May, 1920, and February, 1923, authorized the spending of $2,505,000 for the city's share of the cost of eliminating grade crossings. Twelve projects were named in the bond issue campaign.

The city has thus far spent about $1,110,000 of the bond money for grade crossing elimination, and has completed the Delmar viaduct, Fourteenth street viaduct and Penrose-Kingshighway crossing. The Arsenal street viaduct is under construction, and will be finished this summer.

The other projects have not reached the stage of construction, though engineering plans have been made for most of them. They are in negotiation with the railroads, or under consideration by the State Public Service Commission.

Among the crossings where no construction work has yet been done toward the task of elimination are the Eller street crossing, where a father and daughter were killed by a Missouri Pacific train on Feb. 22, and other crossings of the same line, in the same region, where five persons were killed in 1926 and 1927.

1920 Bond Issue Items.

The 1920 bond issue item for grade crossing elimination was $905,000.

As outlined to the voters, this was to include the Fourteenth street viaduct, the Wabash-Rock Island grade crossing, and the Wabash viaduct was the most important item, the Penrose-Kingshighway viaduct over the Terminal tracks, and Missouri Pacific raising at Southwest avenue.

Of these projects, the Fourteenth street, Delmar and Penrose-Kingshighway viaducts are finished. Plans are in preparation for the Southwest avenue work. The city's share of the Delmar cost was about $270,000; for Fourteenth street, $303,500, and for the Terminal crossing $55,000.

The 1922 bond issue program, with $1,600,000 for grade crossing elimination, included the Rock Island and Southwest avenue projects again, and in addition the following, with unofficial estimates of the city's share of the cost: Viaduct at Kingshighway over Oak Hill (Missouri Pacific) tracks, $155,000; at Shaw avenue over Oak Hill tracks, $80,000; Wabash at Sarah street, Boyle, Newstead and Taylor avenues, $250,000; Oak Hill crossings between Carondelet Park and Kingshighway, $310,000; same, between Irving avenue and Carondelet Park, $250,000; viaduct over Frisco and Illinois Drive at Fyler avenue, $90,000; same, at Arden street, $80,000; over Frisco at Southwest avenue, $230,000.

The Arsenal street viaduct is now being constructed, and the city has advanced most of the cost, $521,000. The Frisco is to pay $300,000, and has paid one-half that amount. The city's share will be the balance, $221,000.

Status of Other Crossings.

Nothing has been done as to the Kingshighway viaduct over the Oak Hill tracks. Plans for the Shaw avenue viaduct have been submitted to the Public Service Commission. The city is negotiating with the Wabash as to the Sarah street crossing. The Fyler avenue viaduct is waiting on that at Arsenal street. Nothing has been done on the Oak Hill crossings named. Plans for the Frisco viaduct at Southwest avenue have been made. At the last-named place, only a narrow underpass now exists.

The Kingshighway viaduct at Penrose was constructed at a cost of $150,000, out of the total of $180,000.

L. R. Bowen, city engineer in charge of bridge plans, said, in the absence of President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, that negotiations with railroads in the crossing matters took considerable time. The roads, he said, wish to distribute grade crossing elimination over a term of years. It is the city's policy to "go along with" the roads, rather than to enter into litigation with them. The city, Bowen said, is now in active negotiations with the Wabash as to

More Training for Country Teachers

THE rural child is to have a square deal, the schools must do much better, in the opinion of Etta O. Christensen, director of rural education of the Minnesota State Teachers' College.

She told the National Society of College Teachers of Education at their annual meeting here today, that, "last year, she asserted, is too short a time to make the necessary preparation for teaching in a rural school."

"When we compare the qualifications of rural teaching today with those of 10 years ago, we feel that great improvement has been made," said Mrs. Christensen, "and yet we must do better if the rural child is to have a square deal."

"The problem is before us of standards to be met by entrants to the rural curricula, courses to be pursued during the training period and requirements to be met in practice."

"There should be the minimum for this highest of all teaching jobs. The practice teaching should occur in the second year and should be of two kinds: Teaching in the grades and teaching in our typical rural schools."

THE LEFT-HANDED AX
By Evelyn Johnson and Gretta
Palmer.

AND this, gentlemen, is the laboratory where I discovered the gas. In the small room beyond are my sleeping quarters—during the past few months I have been in such a state of scientific excitement that I have rarely walked the hundred yards to the house. In the next room are the experimental rats who should be rejoicing that my ultimate success has saved them from the fate of their ancestors."

The speaker was a tall gaunt man with the abstracted courtesy of the scientist who has heard not more than half of the remarks about him for years, but has acquired a perfect technique of assumed interest. Dr. Cochran had only the week before completed the exhaustive researches which finally led to his discovery of a new gas; a gas very precious to any nation which must, however reluctantly, lay its plans during times of peace for the contingency of war. His gas was odorless, invisible, and heavier than air. It brought immediate death to any in its path.

The four men who accompanied him asked about the premises with a fitting deference. The engineers, who were well-harred, more for the protection of the strolling robber than to baffle him. An ignorant person, stumbling about the chamberlain who went to wake him, and who had the intelligence to whom the secret was given, was several unusual features about the case which make it imperative for us to examine each of you separately. I need only say that the assistant reports the disappearance of the formula."

Cohen was first. He deposed that he had not stirred from his room during the night, and had heard no untoward sounds. He was asked to write his name and to empty his pockets. The contents of these were added to a heap on the table which he recognized as the garage. The three rooms were fitted with the most modern appliances and even the Doctor's bedroom had all the austerity of a laboratory. The ghosts of dead guinea-pigs and live men would never haunt these white tiled rooms.

The four visitors had come to Washington in hope that the Government would be satisfied to buy Cochran's formula. There seemed little doubt that the promises of the eminent discoverer were more than borne out by the properties of the new gas, and before even mastering its decaysable name, the four agreed that the Government must possess it.

Among the four, however, was one man who had not the slightest intention of permitting this priceless formula to fall into the hands of the American Government if the considerable resources of the country could not be used to permit it to that country. On the surface, he was a foreigner of every thing he had brought with him in his suitcase. The other three were cross-examined in turn. None of them had heard anything suspicious or had the slightest light to shed on the murder. There was only one break in the routine. When MacGregor wrote his name, the detective looked at each other significantly.

The little group of articles placed on the table were examined by the scientific scientists.

"We would permit it to credit it to that country. On the surface, he was a foreigner of every thing he had brought with him in his suitcase.

There was dark, smart little Dr. Cohen, whose Oriental lips spouted all the pep slogans of the most modern of big-business scenes; MacGregor, the laconic Scotchman who did as many setting-up exercises as any American of the third generation; big, Mr. McCarthy who looked like nine-tenths of the policemen of New York; and Cohen, who had succeeded as well as any native-born son in taking a paying proposition of chemical engineering.

"Until we have come to a definite term, Dr. Cochran," said Cohen slyly, "I hope you will assure us that you have no intention of permitting any other nation to suspect that you have discovered this stupendous weapon."

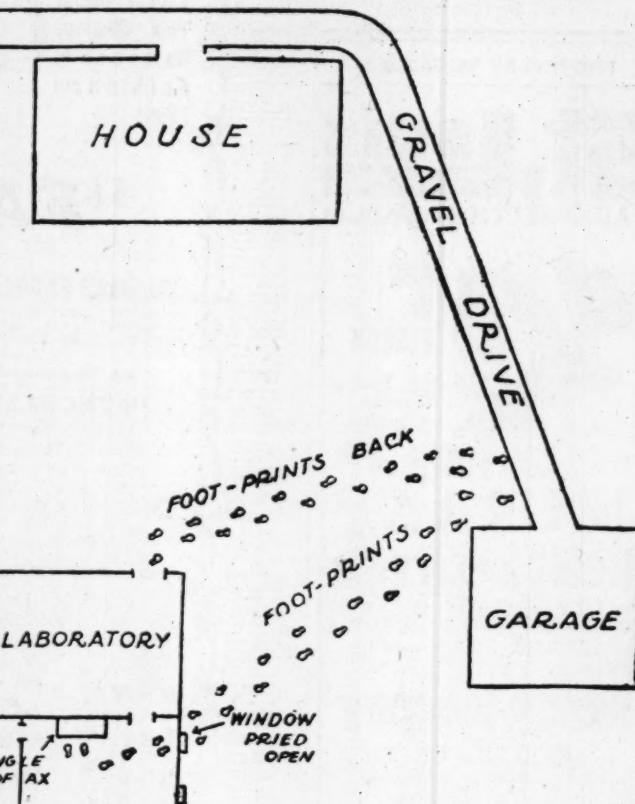

"Naturally," said Cochran, "it is not my intention to fall before an army employing my own gas. I know its lethal properties too well. But we can leave that part of the argument until tomorrow. You must be tired after your train journey, gentlemen—and you especially, Mr. McCarthy, if I am correct in my estimate of the motor traffic on Route King Highway."

They sat an interesting group as they sat around the fire that night while the rain beat against the pane of the comfortable living room in the big colonial house where Dr. Cochran provided his guests with those comforts he had so well deserved. Dr. Cohen had the fervent eyes, the restless features and the brilliance of a man whose study is motivated by an enormous curiosity. MacGregor had no capacity for scientific talk, but his occasional dry remarks, whose humor was entirely on his eminent confreres had made him the terror of a world where wit is an unfamiliar and almost prodigious quality. There was a great deal of power and a relentless intellect behind McCarthy's boring countenance and endless verbiage, and little. Both Cohen's rapsier thrusts were always a match for the arguments of the dazzling and dramatic Cohen.

MacGregor finally suggested bed.

Dr. Cochran bade his good night at the doors of those several rooms and himself made his way to the austere seclusion of his laboratory bedroom. When Bonita, the last to appear the next morning, made his way to the dining room with her bavarian mouth-waterings at the thought of bacon and eggs, he found his confreres gathered in a stricken group, being interviewed by a staff of New York detectives.

"Dr. Cochran has been murdered during the night," said their chief. "He was discovered at an early hour this morning by the chamberlain who went to wake him, and who had the intelligence to whom the secret was given.

MacGregor showed no inclination to confess anything more than horror. He was so much hustled into the garden to the garage that he was still there when the two strangers were still there. Never had he seen anyone just like them. Right away he looked at their bills. You can sometimes learn a whole lot from the bill of a bird. Danny looked to see if these bills were hooked. CHAPTER THIRTEEN "Bear-in-the-Woods"

WITH one leap the Desert Rat knocked over his assailant, and the squat dark body of what was probably the most surprised man in all Nevada went rolling down the rocky slope, his gun clattering after him.

The Rat scrambled back and smiled at the boy. That smile worked miracles. Wide-eyed, the child had watched the attack, had craned forward to follow with his gaze the precipitous descent of their attacker. The six-year-old mind had been grappling with far more than it could understand, but hers was something it knew.

Little Alex grinned. "He got it, didn't he?" he asked, and regarded his companion with admiration.

The Rat nodded. "But he'll be back for more, sonny. We'd better be moving."

Trusting the warm little fingers gripped the old hand and the two climbed swiftly higher into the mountain.

A grotesque pair, the stragglers from the desert and the tow-headed boy and his friend striped like permanent candy.

"Aren't we 'most there?" the child demanded. He was getting out of breath and the Rat was panting, his wrinkled face flushed and perspiring.

Below them, two figures were climbing steadily in pursuit, dark men who knew better the winding ways of Below-the-line than the trackless paths of the Sierras. "Take a shot at the old guy," urged one. "Now, might hit the kid."

"Most," the Rat agreed. He looked down at the child gently, then, smiling, "Want to ride papa's back?"

Why, this was fun, "Giddap!" shouted Alex, and pounded the shoulders with enthusiastic fists.

In the Hodges' living-room, Felicia waited, and Dick waited with her.

"Would you rather be alone?" he asked her, finally, in a low voice.

She stirred. "Oh, not just you. She looked at him sadly. "Oh, Dick, my dear—"

"I am your dear."

Side by side they sat, silent, and Dick's heart swelled with love and pity. Was it only nine days that he had known this girl, only a week that he had loved her? So deeply had they lived that it seemed as though everything in the past had been but a prelude.

"Oh, I love you so!" he whispered, and her fingers clung to him.

Tragedy and terror had welded their love into something greater than themselves, a force which would continue through all their lives. Misunderstandings, quarrels—such things could never be, for now, thought Dick. Waiting there, hour after hour, he felt that they had become one person. Marriage, divorce, remarriage—such things were merely forms to be gone through, empty and without meaning. This woman beside him was his mate. Some day they might share happiness together; now her tragedy and suffering were his.

The telephone rang. He sprang to answer it.

A faint glow of color appeared in Felicia's cheeks as she heard his voice, eager, excited.

"J. E.," he told her. "He's got hold of the best lawyer in town, and everything he can lay hands on at our disposal. He says to tell you that if your child is in Nevada, he'll get him for you. The roads and railroads are all being watched. He's sending a state policeman named Lanier up here."

Ann, who had just come in, sighed in relief.

"Felicia, honey, we'll have little Alex back by night! Don't you worry, I'll Mr. Nevada!"

Perhaps her confidence was not so great as it seemed, but the color remained in Felicia's face. . . .

Sam Lanier was a man to inspire confidence. Broad-shouldered and brown, with the mild voice of one who doesn't have to sound hard-boiled, he filled the room with his presence.

He addressed Dick without preliminaries. "If we take a plane and scout around—of course we can land, most places—but we may get a trace of them."

Felicia gave a little cry of anguish. The picture of seeing, from the air, her boy in the hands of his captors—seeing him and being powerless to reach him, was agonizing.

And as her eyes implored Dick, he started.

"Look here, Lanier—this is just a chance!" he said excitedly. "In case we do find them. I've never made a parachute jump, but a lot of bigger tools than I am are doing it daily. If—"

"If?" said Lanier. "Come on."

"Oh, Dick!" Felicia was torn now by fear for him. "If anything happened to you—"

"Rot!" said Dick. "What could happen? You try to get some sleep, Felicia—and don't worry, now."

"Don't worry!" She looked at him hopelessly.

"We'll get your boy for you, ma'am!" Sam Lanier promised.

Leaping swiftly to the landing-field, Lanier explained, in terse phrases, the workings of a parashute.

"Wait 'till you're clear of the plane. Count slowly—one—two—

Perfume's Place
In the Ensemble

MODERNS definitely have accepted perfume as a complement to the costume. This nicely of perfect harmony, advocated by smart metropolitan shops, is practiced thus far by the exceptionally fastidious woman who does not feel well groomed unless her underthings blend with her dress and her garters match her scarf and handkerchief, or other small matters in this fitness of color.

Perfuming Feet
This unpleasant but frequent complaint can be helped and usually cured if the same things are done regularly each day to accomplish results. The feet should be bathed and the stockings changed every day. Into each change of stockings drop boracic acid. This will soon prove beneficial.

is advised by famous blenders of essences for the reason that a woman becomes immune to a scent used constantly and there is a pleasing psychology in the stimulant of a different type. Further, it aids in creating that little breath of mystery in which every woman delights.

Perfumes now are used with such a clear knowledge of self that they have come to take as important a place in the ensemble as shoes which match hat or bag or both. Hosiery is tinted to match shades of powder. So perfumed in dress is but the linking up of these parts for the costume entire.

Sophisticated perfumes now come in suitable bottles and packages and vice versa—a sophisticated color.

Several interesting ways of harmonizing perfumes to ensembles are possible by changing the type of scent with the costume, by matching the fragrance to a bouquet the package of which retains its nature as exotic or ingenious to match the color of the frock, the accessories or jewelry.

This necessitates perhaps more than one perfume, which very fact ed odor in a glistening black bottle decorated with gold, and a simple sweet fragrance in gray and silver or white and gold.

The correct perfume for any personality and any costume may be found by selecting one from several bottles or packages that proclaim themselves distinctive in type. By choosing the one most pleasant and agreeable the scent is bound to be expressive of the individual and as becoming as the dress.

Flu Sufferer Tells of Miraculous Recovery

Phospho-Cod Cures Cough and Run-Down Condition in Two Weeks

I was weak and run-down, as the result of the "flu" which left me with a very persistent cough, so bad that I couldn't sleep day or night for two weeks due to coughing spells. I had tried several remedies that were recommended to me but got no relief until I took Phospho-Cod, which eliminated my cough entirely.

I have just finished taking my third bottle and am taking it a day or two more. I have been working now for two weeks, feel much stronger, and have gained in weight. You may see this testimonial at

10 PCT. MONEY BREAKS LIST NEAR CLOSE

Advances in Railroad and Copper Shares Followed Irregular Early Price Trend.

TEN CARRIERS TOUCH PEAKS FOR THIS YEAR

U. S. Steel Among Shares to React Several Points in the Late Downward Movement.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Marking up of the call money rate from 8 to 10 per cent, coupled with reports of clashes between the Federal and revolutionary troops in Mexico, started a heavy selling movement on the New York Stock Exchange today. Early gains of 1 to 4 points were in many instances wiped out, and at least a score issues hammered 3 to 13 points below yesterday's final quotations.

Radio (old stock) broke from an early high of 233 to 231, and Wright Aeronautical, Johns-Manville, National Cash Register, Safety Way Stores, Midland Steel Products preferred and Electric Autolite sold down 5 points or more. Earlier in the day at least 20 coppers and rails moved into new high ground with a decided strong movement.

Averages Are Down.

The average of 50 industrial shares declined 1.3 points, 26 railroads .5 of a point and 29 utilities 2.5 points.

Banks called between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 in loans.

Call money renewed at 8 per cent. Other monetary accommodations showed no change. Bankers held out little hope of any marked relaxation in money rates before the March 15 income tax payments and Government financing are out of the way. No official comment was forthcoming on rumors that New York Federal Reserve Bank directors voted to raise therediscount rate to 6 per cent at the long meeting last month, but failed to receive the approval of the Reserve Board.

New Highs Among Rails.

Except for the recent publication of a series of favorable traffic and earnings statements, there was nothing to explain the sudden revival of interest in the rail shares. Brokers pointed out that they had failed to keep pace with the advance in industrials and were "out of line" with the general list. New high records for the year were established by Missouri Pacific common and preferred, Seaboard Air Line common and preferred, Chicago & Great Western preferred, Western Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Colorado & Southern and Erie common.

Calling of a special meeting of the Anaconda Copper directors for late today was accompanied by reports that plans were under way to retire part of the funded debt through the issuance of additional common stock. Anaconda ran up over 7 points to a new high at 159 1/4, and Kennecott moved up 2 1/2 points to a new top at 95 1/2 by early afternoon.

Stockholders of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co. are given the right to subscribe for two shares of additional common at $55 a share for every five shares now held, the proceeds to be used to retire $102,000 in 6 per cent first mortgage bonds and for other corporate purposes, it was announced later in day.

Western Union ran up 8 1/4 points to within a point of the year's high. General Gas and Electric jumped 8 1/4 points and Puritan Baking, Ross Service, General Electric, Alcoa Chemical, Goodyear Rubber, Packard Motors and Victor Talking Machine sold 2 to 7 1/2 points higher, closing 2 points net higher to 2 1/2 points net lower.

Refined sugar prices dropped to the lowest levels in eight years.

Selling at Opening.

Further selling developed at the opening of today's market.

Radio (old stock) broke 8 1/4 points to 215 1/4, as contrasted with last week's high of 412 1/4. National Power and Light and National Bell Telephone also each dropped 2 1/2 points and initial losses of a point or so were registered by Radio (new stock), International Telephone, American Can, American and Foreign Power. Anaconda opened with a block of 15,000 shares up 1 1/2, and Kennecott opened 1 1/2 points higher. Erie Railroad common touched a new 1929 high.

Closing stock prices with other tables and market news will be found on pages 23, 24 and 25.
